Are You Interested In the Indiana Construction Industry?

If so you should be a regular reader of THE INDIANA CONSTRUCTION RECORDER that your competitor, who is a subscriber, can not steal a march on you.

It is the only paper published in the state dealing directly and exclusively with the construction industry and presenting investigated, advance information along this line—information of vital interest to the contractor and material supply men doing business in Indiana.

It will inform you as to—

WHO—is going to build;

WHAT—is to be built;

WHEN—it is to be built;

WHERE—it is to be built.

Added to the above four essential points, the paper will give you construction details and the award of contracts.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Setting Forth the Purpose, Aim and Policy of this Publication.

With this, the initial issue, THE INDIANA CONSTRUCTION RECORDER makes its entrance into the Indiana construction field. Each succeeding week it is the hope of the management to present a better edition that will prove of mutual interest to the architect, contractor and material supply man.

The purposes of the publication are many—primarily to keep those interested in the construction industry in direct touch with each other, with the hope that it will prove mutually beneficial to all.

All effort will be concentrated on Indiana in an endeavor to present a medium whose influence will be exerted for good from Lake Michigan and the northern state line to the southern boundary along the Ohio River and from the Ohio to the Illinois state lines.

One of the principal features will be the editorial department where a comprehensive survey of the field will be made carefully, a general analysis presented with the view of sizing up the outlook. National features, as they affect the architect, contractor and conditions locally, will be treated. In this department also will be found helpful features pertaining to the architectural profession. All Indiana architects are to feel free to contribute articles and ideas that will tend to the advancement of the profession.

In the building news section, the policy to be pursued will be to present only live, authentic, advance information, reports that can be relied upon to produce action. Careful consideration will be given to detail, size, construction and the material required, when bids are to be received, and, to whom contracts are awarded. This news will be right up to the minute, being gathered daily about the state, sent direct to the Indianapolis office and presented to the reader

This news is to be secured by traveling reporters who have had years of experience in the Indiana field along this line of endeavor, who know local conditions intimately and realize the importance of verified news.

THE INDIANA CONSTRUCTION RECORDER PUBLISHING CO. is an independent organization and is not a subsidiary of any other dispenser of building news reports. It will cull nothing, will hold back nothing, neither will it print mere face, skeleton reports, instead, it will present the news immediately and give all the details obtainable at the date of issue.

Only after a thorough investigation of the field, once the idea was conceived to establish such a paper, did the management decide to proceed with the publication. The Indiana Society of Architects, individual architects, contractors and engineers in all sections of the state endorsed the project and, since other states maintain construction papers, it seemed only reasonable that there was a mission for such a publication in Indiana that would present construction news at a minimum cost and also promote solidity, harmony and a mutual interest amongst those engaged in the construction industry in Indiana.

ENCOURAGING ELEMENTS

Are Not Lacking in the Indiana Construction Field.

A condition of uncertainty still pervades the building construction atmosphere with a trend toward optimism and an underlying hope that, all things considered, this line of endeavor will show a decided improvement before many more weeks will have rolled around. This does not mean that there will be a sudden revival of business on a large scale, rather, that gradually the construction industry, which was so hard hit by the war, will show an improved stage of development offering promise to those engaged in this field.

The greatest encouragement to be gleaned from present day conditions lies in the fact that all public officials who have to do with construction work are wholeheartedly advocating various public improvements to care for the local labor situation, the aim being to offer employment to men back from the army and those thrown out of employment by the cessation of the various war industries.

It is by this means that a revival of the construction industry will be accomplished. Possibly it will not be as fast as some would like to see it but it will be along the lines of orderly sequence.

Already public construction work is beginning to appear. Several contracts on large projects in the State have been awarded this spring; any number of school house contracts are down on the calendar for awarding in the near future; architects are busily engaged preparing plans for still other schools and numerous township trustees have buildings of like character under contemplation for construction this season. The various counties and cities have memorial buildings, city halls, fire department buildings, libraries and other public buildings up for consideration for erection in the near future. This public work alone should create a fair volume of business during the current year and certainly affords hope for the future.

In referring to public construction, mention should be made also to improvements relative to new roads, bridges, sewers and the like. It is true this is going out of the building field and yet it has a bearing on the same for the confidence it will inspire in the public. There are miles of brick, concrete and hard surfaced roads up for consideration, some of which are ready for the contractors, plans are being prepared for others, and, still more are being contemplated. It is early for bridges but these will be appearing in a few weeks. Many cities are working out sewerage plans, the largest of which is the sewage disposal plant for the city of Indianapolis which will cost $2,000,000 and, in all probability, will be started this season.

There is much talk about high prices tending to hold up construction work and, they may to a certain extent, but, to offset this is the eagerness displayed by the prospective builder, who has been delayed for several years by the war, to get his work done now that the restrictions on building have been entirely removed. Many owners seem to realize that, with other prices up, there is going to be no great decline in the building material market in the immediate future, consequently, their desire is to get things started. He who sits back and waits for the bottom to fall out of the material market to bring down prices with a crash is due for a long, tedious wait, according to the prevailing tone of the market.

Those who are pessimistically inclined should take a jaunt out over the State, call on the architects who are all, more or less, busily engaged on promising prospective work, drop in for a chat with the various public officials and they can not but become imbued with the spirit of optimism, an optimism that is reasonable and promises a better year in the construction field than Indiana has known for some time.

THE COVER DESIGN

Its Origin, Suggestion and Execution Due to the Architect.

The management of the paper takes this means of acknowledging its debt of gratitude to the Indiana Architectural profession and its deep appreciation of the co-operation extended in the matter of the cover conception.

In the working out of details for a publication that was to be devoted exclusively to the construction industry the idea of a typical cover appealed. The subject was taken up with the architects all over the State, who were loud in their praise of and heartily endorsed the scheme.

The design was suggested by architect Herbert Foltz, who kindly loaned the cover from a brochure that he issued several years ago. It seemed the very thing desired and was thankfully accepted by the management.

Having received the endorsement of the cover scheme from architects and those interested in construction, and been presented with the design, the next thing to do was to secure an artist. At this juncture Wilbur B. Shook of the architectural firm of McGuire & Shook, stepped forward and offered to help the cause along by volunteering to draw up the cover. The arrangement of the title and the lettering was Mr. Shook's own idea, to create a general harmony to offset a cover that would be typical of the architectural profession, one of the fundamental principles of building construction.

In connection with Mr. Shook's efforts it might be well to add that, though he was buried deep with his architectural duties he, nevertheless, put them aside to execute this cover, of which we feel proud and which we are pleased to present to the public.

Mr. Donald Campbell, Editor,

INDIANA CONSTRUCTION RECORDER,

612 Indiana Pythian Bldg.

Indianapolis, Indiana.

Dear Sir:

The proposition you place before me, the using of your new publication as the official medium for the distribution of items of interest to the building craft in general, is of great interest and I am certain will appeal to the entire membership of the Indiana Society of Architects.

I therefore heartily indorse and approve of the use of this publication, the INDIANA CONSTRUCTION RECORDER, as the medium thru which the architects of the State may be reached and as a channel opened for the frankest interchange of thought and action.

Such a movement can be made to be of tremendous value.

With wishes of success for the new publication, I am,

Cordially yours,

A. F. Wickes
President.

Here,
There,
Everywhere,
All at the Same Time.
Impossible?
No.

Tell the architect, engineer and contractor in Ft. Wayne, South Bend and Northern Indiana your sales message at the same time you are enlightening those at Indianapolis, Evansville and Terre Haute.

THE INDIANA CONSTRUCTION RECORDER offers the medium by which the advertiser may accomplish the feat of addressing the building fraternity in all sections of the state, relatively, at the same time.

Its circulation is direct, including every architect in Indiana, the engineers, general and sub-contractors, embracing all the building trades in the state construction industry. Cards get lost, circulars follow a bee line to the waste basket. Both cost money, money, figuratively speaking, lost.

At one cost, at one stroke establish yourself. Remind the architect, engineer and contractor, every Saturday you are in business; don't let them forget it; cover your territory weekly.

Secure a listing in the Indexed Buyers' Guide, where materials are classified under their individual headings, and you will be permanently established in the Indiana supply market.

Your ad. in THE INDIANA CONSTRUCTION RECORDER will attain these ends. The cost is reasonable.

Rates upon application.

If so you should be a regular reader of THE INDIANA CONSTRUCTION RECORDER that your competitor, who is a subscriber, can not steal a march on you.

It is the only paper published in the state dealing directly and exclusively with the construction industry and presenting investigated, advance information along this line—information of vital interest to the contractor and material supply men doing business in Indiana.

It will inform you as to—

WHO—is going to build;

WHAT—is to be built;

WHEN—it is to be built;

WHERE—it is to be built.

Added to the above four essential points, the paper will give you construction details and the award of contracts.

SPEED

That's What the Hoosier is Injecting Into the Building Game.

An innovation was sprung in the Indiana construction industry that will make the building fraternity in other states hustle if they intend to keep up with the Hoosiers, they're working that fast.

Architects Vonnegut & Bohn, Indianapolis, had a theater remodeling project on hand that had to be rushed through without the loss of time. Plans having been prepared, a large steam shovel was brought into action and set to work biting great hunks of earth from the site with such rapidity that soon there was a call for brick.

Mere trains but creep in this age of speed, and, mail does reach its destination, in time.

Not far from Indianapolis, at the Speedway, is an army aviation station. Bert Davis, sales manager for the Western Brick Co., got in touch with his friend Major King who was about to leave for Chanute Field, Rantoul, Ill. The major kindly consented to rush the S. O. S. for brick to headquarters.

Exactly at noon the great propellers of the major's aeroplane were set in motion and the machine glided from the ground into a sea of brilliant spring sunshine to shortly disappear in the West.

When the major was gone Mr. Davis got Danville, Ill., on the phone and told them to watch for the aeroplane which was headed that way with an order. The man at the other end of the wire happened to recall that it was April 1st., and said, "Come again. You can't fool me. What is it you want?" He was informed to just keep on the lookout for the airship.

In the afternoon a telegram reached Indianapolis saying, "Order received at 1:05 P. M." The ninety miles between Indianapolis and Danville had been covered in just five minutes over the hour and aviation had figured for the first time in the local construction industry.

TO LAUNCH CAMPAIGN

Architects Urge Action that License Law May Be Realized.

In the 1917 Legislature S. B. 380 was introduced for licensing Architects. It had been submitted to the Governor and would have received his approval. S. B. 381 for licensing structural engineers was also introduced. Both died in the Senate. H. B. 182 a duplicate of S. B. 380 was killed in the House by a vote of 52 to 36 on third reading.

In 1919, a committee consisting of P. O. Klingensmith, three Architects of the Architects Legislative Committee, Merritt Harrison, Herbert Foltz, and Herbert L. Bass, and the three Engineers of the Engineers Legislative Committee, Chas. Brossman, H. O. Garman, and Hugh J. Baker, formulated a new joint bill for the licensing of Architects and Structural Engineers. The Architects Committee was appointed by the Indiana Society of Architects and the Engineers Committee by the American Association of Engineers.

The bill was not ready for introduction until late in January after the Legislature had been in session for two or three weeks. Then attempts were made to interest a Senator to introduce it but without success. Finally in the House, Eph P. Dailey of Allen County agreed to introduce it.

The triplicate copies required were prepared by the Legislative Bureau, and the bill was introduced on Feb. 4, 1919, as House Bill No. 258. It was referred to Judiciary B Committee and on Feb. 6 was reported favorably. It required but one day in Committee on Phraseology.

On Feb. 19 it passed second reading with one amendment submitted by Dailey to cure a misprint and to provide for appeal to the courts from revocation. This was in response to a sentiment popular in the House, expressed by Givan of Marion.

Although it should then have been handed down for third reading by the Speaker, it did not appear. Repeated efforts were made by Dailey to advance it but the answer was always that each bill must take its turn. Evidence finally developed that bills were being considered out of turn and Harrison and Luten appealed to the Speaker in person.

The bill was found tucked away with other rejects in the Speaker's desk. The Speaker withdrew it from that bundle and placed it three or four down in current bills, on March 6. However it did not appear that morning and the jam of bills at the end of the session prevented further progress.

To have secured hearty co-operation between the Architects and Engineers was a considerable accomplishment for one session, and with this for a beginning and a start made now the bill can easily be passed at the next session.

For the 1921 Legislature, work should begin now and a sponsor for the bill should be selected. A revised bill meeting the objections of the past legislators should be immediately written and submitted to the public for approval or disapproval.

Following is the bill that failed to mature at the last session of the legislature:

WHY A LICENSE LAW FOR ARCHITECTS AND STRUCTURAL ENGINEERS.

To the Indiana State Legislature:

The Architects and Structural Engineers of the State of Indiana present this bill for licensing members of their professions.

Reason for Bill

The primary reason for this bill is to safeguard the public health and life by providing gradually for a higher quality of professional skill in the arrangement, sanitation, ventilation, heating and safe design of buildings and structures by architects and structural engineers.

Nonpartisan Board

This bill provides for a nonpartisan board which will guarantee that politics will not dominate, but that men of ability will govern the examining of architects and structural engineers to protect the public from the incompetency and recklessness of unqualified men. Ill-planned and unsafe buildings are a continual menace to public health and safety.

No Expense to the State.

This bill, if enacted into law, will produce a fund of $10,000 to $15,000 the first year. The estimated expense of operation from this fund would be about $3,000. There are approximately 150 architects and about 150 structural engineers in the state who would apply for licenses.

Each succeeding year the renewal fee of $10.00 would produce a fund of about $3,000 to which should be added a considerable number of new applicants at $50.00 each.

Physicians and dentists are now licensed by examining boards appointed by the Governor from lists recommended by their associations.

Those in Practice Now Licensed Without Examination.

Section 6 provides for licensing anyone practicing at the time of enactment of the statute upon payment of $30.00 so that no hardship may be worked upon anyone at present practicing in the professions. The intention is to gradually raise the standard by giving the Board of Examiners the authority to require higher qualifications for new applicants in years to come.

States Where Licenses are Required.

At least ten states, Illinois, New York, California, New Jersey, Utah, Florida, Colorado, Michigan, Louisiana, North Carolina and Iowa already have laws providing for licenses to architects or structural engineers. In many states legislation is now pending and the movement for such statutes has become increasingly insistent with the demand for better living conditions.

Reciprocity.

Provides for reciprocity with other states, territories and countries, with like standards for practice.

Section 13 defines architecture and structural engineering and limits the practice in these professions to those who have qualified.

Owners Liberity Not Limited.

He is not required to employ professional services, but can employ whomsoever he pleases so long as they do not practice as an Architect or as a Structural Engineer.

Source of Income to State.

Expenditures may be made only from the income of the board. All surplus over $3,000 remaining at the end of the year accrues to the state for its general fund. It will thus prove a source of considerable income to the state and can not be an expense to the state. The only fund available for its expenses is its own income. In Illinois $10,000 was turned into the State Treasury from the Architect's license fund.

ARCHITECTS AND STRUCTURAL ENGINEERS LICENSE BILL

A bill for an Act to provide for licensing Architects and Structural Engineers and regulating the practice of architecture and structural engineering.

Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That; within thirty (30) days after the passage of this act, the Governor shall appoint a State Board of Examiners of Architects and Structural Engineers to be composed of five (5) members, not more than three (3) of whom shall be of one political party, two (2) shall be Architects and two (2) shall be Structural Engineers and one shall be neither an Architect nor a Structural Engineer, all of whom shall be residents of Indiana, in good standing, and the professional members of which shall have been engaged in the independent practice of their respective professions for at least five (5) years. One member of the board, an Architect, shall be designated to hold office until the first Monday of January, 1920; and one (1) a Structural Engineer shall hold office until the first Monday in January, 1921; and one (1) an Architect shall hold office until the first Monday in January, 1922; and two (2) Structural Engineers, and a person neither an Architect nor a Structural Engineer shall hold office until the first Monday in January, 1923. Thereafter, upon the expiration of the term of office of a member of the board, the Governor shall appoint a successor, who shall have like qualifications and shall hold his office for the succeeding four (4) years, and until his successor shall have been appointed and qualified. Any vacancy occurring in the membership of the Board shall be filled by the Governor for the unexpired term. Appointments to the State Board of Examiners of Architects and Structural Engineers shall be made from a recommended list of (5) Architects and five (5) Structural Engineers from the Indiana Society of Architects and the Indiana Engineering Society, respectively, except the member who is neither an Architect nor a Structural Engineer.

Sec. 2. The members of the State Board of Examiners of Architects and Structural Engineers shall, before entering upon the discharge of their duties, file with the Secretary of State their oaths of office. They shall, as soon as convenient after their appointment, and annually thereafter on the first Wednesday of January in each year, organize by electing from their number a President and a Secretary. The Secretary shall act as Treasurer of the board. The Board shall have a seal and adopt rules and regulations not inconsistent with this act to govern its proceedings. The Secretary shall keep a record of all proceedings of the Board, which shall be open at all reasonable times for public inspection. The Secretary, before entering upon his duties, shall file a bond with the Secretary of State in such form and with such securities and in such sum as may be approved by the Secretary of State. The Secretary shall receive a salary which shall be fixed by the Board and which shall not exceed the sum of fifteen hundred dollars ($1,500.00) per annum; he shall also receive clerical, traveling and other expenses incurred in the performance of his official duties. The other members of the Board shall receive the sum of ten dollars ($10.00) for each day actually engaged in the duties of their office, and all necessary expense shall be itemized and approved by the Board and a copy filed with the Secretary.

Sec. 3. The regular meetings of the Board shall be held quarterly on the first Wednesday of January, April, July and October of each year. Special meetings shall be called by the Secretary upon the written request of any three (3) members, by giving at least five (5) days written notice to each member, reckoning from the day on which the notices are postmarked, telegraphed or personally delivered. Three (3) members of the Board shall constitute a quorum.

Sec. 4. The Board shall adopt rules and regulations for the examination of applicants for licenses to practice architecture or structural engineering in accordance with the provisions of this act, and may amend, modify and repeal such rules and regulations from time to time. The Board shall, immediately upon the adoption, amendment, modifications or repeal of its rules of government, or of its rules and regulations for examination of applicants for licenses, file with the Secretary of State and publish at least twice in one (1) daily newspaper published in the State of Indiana, a copy of such rules, regulations, amendments, modifications or repeal thereof.

Sec. 5. Provisions shall be made by the Board for holding at least twice in each year, examinations of applicants for license to practice architecture or structural engineering. Any person of good moral character over twenty-one (21) years of age, upon payment of a fee of twenty dollars ($20.00) to the Secretary of the Board, shall be entitled to an examination to determine his qualifications.

The examination of an applicant for a license to practice architecture shall have special reference to the planning, designing and construction of buildings or structures, and their sanitation, and shall include a test of the candidate's knowledge of the strength of materials, their properties with special reference to their strength and safety, and of his ability to make practical application of such knowledge in the ordinary professional work of an Architect and in the duties of a supervisor of mechanical work in a building or structure, also such other subjects or matters as the Board may require from time to time.

The examination of an applicant for a license to practice structural engineering shall have special reference to the design and construction of buildings or structures according to scientific principles and with special reference to strength and safety; the strength and properties of the various building materials; the principles of theoretical and applied mechanics; the ability of the applicant to apply his knowledge to the ordinary requirements of structural engineering; also such other subjects or matters as the Board may require from time to time.

If the result of the examination of any applicant shall be satisfactory to a majority of the board, under its rules, the Secretary shall, upon order of the Board, issue to the applicant a certificate to that effect; and upon payment to the Secretary of the Board of a fee of thirty ($30.00) dollars by the holder of such a certificate, the Secretary shall thereupon issue to the person named therein a license to practice architecture or a license to practice structural engineering in the State of Indiana, in accordance with the provisions of this act, which license shall contain the full name and the residence and age of the applicant, and shall be signed by the President and Secretary and be sealed with the seal of the Board, and shall be in force during the calendar year in which it is issued. All papers received by the Secretary in relation to applications for license shall be kept on file by the Secretary.

Sec. 6. Any person who shall, by affidavit, show to the satisfaction of the Board that he was engaged and in good standing, in the practice of Architecture or of Structural Engineering on the date of the passage of this act, shall be entitled to a license without an examination; Provided, that such application shall be made within six (6) months after this act is in force. Such license when granted shall set forth the fact that the person to whom the same was issued was practicing architecture or structural engineering in the State of Indiana and was of good repute in the practice of his profession at the time this act went into force, and is therefore entitled to a license to practice architecture or structural engineering without an examination by the Board; and the Secretary shall, upon the receipt of the fee of thirty dollars ($30.00) issue to the person named in such affidavit a license to practice architecture or a license to practice structural engineering in the State of Indiana in accordance with the provisions of this act, which license shall be in force during the calendar year in which it is issued.

Sec. 7. Each member who practices as a professional member of any co-partnership engaged in practicing architecture or structural engineering shall be licensed under this act. No corporation shall be licensed to practice architecture or structural engineering, but the same may employ licensed architects or licensed structural engineers.

Sec. 8. The State Board of Examiners may in its discretion issue a license without examination upon payment of a fee of fifty ($50.00) dollars to an Architect or Structural Engineer licensed under the laws of any other State or Territory of the United States or any foreign country, provided it appears to the Board that in the State or Territory or Country in which said license was issued, the requirements for a license to practice the profession of Architecture or Structural Engineering were equal to those required in this State, and provided that such State, Territory or Country accord a like privilege to Architects or Structural Engineers who hold license under the provisions of this act; also to any member of a professional organization which has a high standard of requirements for membership, without examination, at the discretion of the Board upon payment of like fees.

Sec. 9. Each Architect or Structural Engineer shall have his license recorded in the office of the Secretary of State before he can lawfully practice his profession in the State of Indiana and shall pay to the Secretary of State the same fee that is charged for the recording of notarial commissions. A failure to have the license so recorded shall be deemed sufficient cause for suspension or revocation of such license.

Sec. 10. The Secretary of State shall keep in a book provided for the purpose a complete list of all licenses recorded by him under the provision of this act, together with the date of the issuance of each license, its suspension, revocation or reinstatement.

Sec. 11. Every licensed Architect or Structural Engineer shall have a seal, the impression of which shall contain the name of the Architect or Structural Engineer, the place of business, and the words "Licensed Architect, State of Indiana," or "Licensed Structural Engineer, State of Indiana," with which such Architect or Structural Engineer shall stamp all drawings and specifications issued from his office for use in the State of Indiana. In case of a co-partnership of Architects or Structural Engineers, the individual names of the several members licensed shall appear on one seal. Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to prevent any licensed Architect or Structural Engineer from practicing under the name of a former firm to which such Architect or Structural Engineer has succeeded.

Sec. 12. After six (6) months from the date when this act becomes effective, it shall be a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of not less than ten ($10.00) dollars nor more than five hundred ($500.00) dollars for each and every offense, for any person to practice Architecture or Structural Engineering in the State of Indiana without a license, or to put out any sign or card or other device which might indicate to the public that such person is entitled to practice as an Architect or a Structural Engineer. The Board shall cause the prosecution of all persons violating any of the provisions of this act, and may incur necessary expense in that behalf.

Sec. 13. Any person who shall be engaged in the planning, designing or supervision of the erection, enlargement or alteration of buildings or structures or any part thereof for others, and to be constructed by persons other than himself, shall be regarded as practicing Architecture or Structural Engineering within the provisions of this act, but nothing contained in this act shall prevent the draughtsmen, students, clerks of works or superintendents and other employes of those lawfully practicing as Architects or Structural Engineers under licenses as herein provided for, from acting under the instruction, control or supervision of their employers; or shall prevent the employment of superintendents of buildings or structures paid by the owners from acting, if under the control and direction of a licensed Architect or Structural Engineer, who has prepared the drawings and specifiications for the building or structure or any part thereof.

Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to prevent any owner, mechanic, builder or contractor from making plans and specifications for, or supervising the erection, enlargement or alteration of any building or structure or any part thereof that is to be constructed by himself or employes for his own use.

Nothing contained in this act shall prevent any building contractor from employing a foreman or superintendent of building construction if said foreman or superintendent of building constructed is acting under the control of such contractor on buildings or structures for his own use.

Sec. 14. Every licensed Architect or Structural Engineer who desires to continue the practice of his profession, shall annually, during the time he shall continue in such practice, and before the expiration of his current license, pay to the Secretary of the Board a fee of ten ($10.00) dollars and the Secretary shall thereupon issue to such licensed Architect or Structural Engineer a certificate of renewal of his license for the next calendar year, which certificate shall be displayed in a prominent place in the office of such licensed Architect or Structural Engineer.

Any licensed Architect or Structural Engineer who shall fail to have his license so renewed previous to the first day of January in each and every year, shall have such license suspended. Failure to renew such license in proper time shall not deprive such Architect or Structural Engineer of the right of renewal thereafter, but the fee to be paid upon the renewal of the license after such delay shall be fifteen $15.00) dollars.

Sec. 15. Architects' or Structural Engineers' licenses issued and renewed in accordance with the provisions of this act shall remain in full force until revoked for cause, as hereinafter provided. Any license so granted may be revoked by majority vote of the Board for incompetency or recklessness in the design of buildings or structures or for dishonest practice or practices on the part of the holder thereof; but before any license shall be revoked, the holder thereof shall be entitled to at least twenty (20) days written notice of the charge against him, and of the time and place of meeting of the Board for the hearing and determining of such charge.

After the expiration of six (6) months from the date of the revocation of a license, the person whose license shall be revoked may have a new license issued to him by the Secretary upon the certificate of the Board, issued upon satisfactory evidence of proper reasons for such reinstatement, and upon the payment to the Secretary of the fee of fifteen ($15.00) dollars.

For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this act relating to the revocation of licenses, the Board shall have power to issue subpoenas for the attendance and testimony of witnesses. Should any witness so subpoenaed refuse to appear and testify as to any fact within his knowledge or to produce any book or paper within his possession or under his control required to be used as evidence in any such case, the Secretary, if so directed by the Board, shall forthwith report in writing to the Circuit or Superior court of the county in which the Board is in session the facts relating to such refusal; and all questions relating to such refusal shall be heard by such court, together with all evidence in relation to such matter. Should the said court determine that the evidence required of such witness is competent, relevant and material and ought to be given or produced by such witness, the court shall enter an order accordingly. In case of a refusal by the witness to comply with such order, the court shall have power to commit the witness or otherwise punish him as for contempt of court as in other cases of contempt of court. The accused shall be entitled to have witnesses subpoenaed in like manner, and to be heard in person or by counsel in open public trial.

Sec. 16. Wherever the words "Dishonest Practice" or "Dishonest Practices" occur in this act the same is hereby defined to refer to one or more of such practices; and the following are hereby defined as among dishonest practices, for which the license of an Architect or Structural Engineer may be revoked upon trial or investigation by the State Board of Examiners of Architects and Structural Engineers.

1. To be guilty of fraud or misrepresentation in obtaining a license to practice Architecture or Structural Engineering.

2. To conspire or attempt to conspire with any other person to violate the building or sanitary laws of any village, city, town, county or state in which buildings or structures are regulated by law.

3. To give or accept any valuable consideration as a bribe.

Sec. 17. All fees collected by the Board under the provisions of this act shall be paid into the State Treasury and shall constitute a fund for carrying out the provisions of this act. Expenditures of the Board and Secretary shall be paid from said fund. Any amount remaining at the end of any fiscal year in excess of three thousand ($3,000.00) dollars, shall be turned into the general fund of the treasury.

Sec. 18. Within the last week of the fiscal year of the State of Indiana, after the organization of the Board, and annually thereafter, the Secretary of the Board shall make a complete statement of the receipts and expenditures of the Board, attested by the affidavits of the President and Secretary, subject to the approval of the State Auditor.

INDIANA BUILDING PERMITS

As evidence of what the removing of restrictions on building means to the industry in the state, one need but look over the building permits as issued by the following Indiana cities during the month of March.

Though Terre Haute showed a loss in comparison with the March 1919 figures due to the issuance of a permit for a theatre last year, still, the estimated value of work started this year compared favorably with the other cities.

Following is the table of permits.

CITY	PERMITS	EST. COST	PERMITS	EST. COSTS	GAIN	LOSS
Evansville	97	$ 54,125.00	82	$ 42,880.00	26%
Ft. Wayne	51	150.027.00	38	68,246.00	119%
Indianapolis	606	529,314.00	462	334,719.00	58%
Richmond	29	12,185.00	10	3,500.00	248%
South Bend	94	97,140.00	54	29,467.00	229%
Terre Haute	98	53,187.00	81	105,025.00		97%
Total	975	$895,978.00	727	$583,837.00	53%

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

March 25 1919

Mr. Donald Campbell, Editor,

INDIANA CONSTRUCTION RECORDER,

612 Indiana Pythian Bldg.

Indianapolis, Indiana.

Dear Sir:

The proposition you place before me, the using of your new publication as the official medium for the distribution of items of interest to the building craft in general, is of great interest and I am certain will appeal to the entire membership of the Indiana Society of Architects.

I therefore heartily indorse and approve of the use of this publication, the INDIANA CONSTRUCTION RECORDER, as the medium thru which the architects of the State may be reached and as a channel opened for the frankest interchange of thought and action.

Such a movement can be made to be of tremendous value.

With wishes of success for the new publication, I am,

Cordially yours,

A. Frank Wickes
President.

Merritt Harrison
Secretary.

Here,
There,
Everywhere,
All at the Same Time.
Impossible?
No.

Tell the architect, engineer and contractor in Ft. Wayne, South Bend and Northern Indiana your sales message at the same time you are enlightening those at Indianapolis, Evansville and Terre Haute.

THE INDIANA CONSTRUCTION RECORDER offers the medium by which the advertiser may accomplish the feat of addressing the building fraternity in all sections of the state, relatively, at the same time.

Its circulation is direct, including every architect in Indiana, the engineers, general and sub-contractors, embracing all the building trades in the state construction industry. Cards get lost, circulars follow a bee line to the waste basket. Both cost money, money, figuratively speaking, lost.

At one cost, at one stroke establish yourself. Remind the architect, engineer and contractor, every Saturday you are in business; don't let them forget it; cover your territory weekly.

Secure a listing in the Indexed Buyers' Guide, where materials are classified under their individual headings, and you will be permanently established in the Indiana supply market.

Your ad. in THE INDIANA CONSTRUCTION RECORDER will attain these ends. The cost is reasonable.

Rates upon application.

NOW IS THE TIME

Agent for Dept. of Labor Says Conditions are Ripe for Building.

Once more Indiana leads. She has been the first state to promote the "Own Your Own Home" campaign on a state-wide basis, a campaign that promises much for a revival of the long-neglected construction industry. While the inauguration of this movement will benefit locally, nevertheless its influence is of a broader scope, for it undoubtedly will reach over into neighboring states and add incentive to construction in those sections.

Such was the tribute paid by Leslie Willis Sprague, staff lecturer of the U. S. Department of Labor, to Indiana and the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce, which has launched the "Own Your Own Home" move.

In reviewing the national situation, Mr. Sprague laid particular stress upon the necessity of building now in view of the fact that there is a general shortage of homes and public buildings and a stagnation in construction circles. He advocated action to take care of the present surplus of labor caused by unemployment. There is little to indicate a decline in building material prices, as production costs and freight rates are still up with small chance for reductions in the immediate future.

He expressed the opinion that, when normal conditions prevail once more, there will be a serious shortage of labor due to the fact that there will be a dearth of foreign labor usually available, but now needed in Europe for reconstruction purposes. The only solution of this imminent lack of labor is for everybody to work. This, combined with a more extensive use of labor-saving devices, will go a long way toward a solution of the problem.

Mr. Sprague, in addressing the general committees of the "Own Your Own Home" Campaign of the Indiana Chamber of Commerce at Indianapolis, said in part:

"Now is the time for the nation to build. In spite of the fact that it is 'over over there,' it is far from 'over over here.' We are facing today practically the same conditions that confronted the nation in the days after the civil war. In those days the prices of building materials were at a high level and labor was practically on as high a plane as it is today. Statistics show that today in the nation there is a shortage of 700,000 homes and that normally the nation requires the construction of 300,000 homes yearly to take care of the increase of population. An instance of the way in which building was neglected during the war is reflected in the report for the year of 1918. Last year the records show that there were only 125,000 houses built, and these figures include the immense program of government building, incorporating the construction incident to the erection of munitions factories and the housing of the workers. There you have very plainly the reason for the shortage of homes at the present time. The case, however, is not an isolated one, since the same conditions exist practically in every city of any size in the United States.

GENERAL SHORTAGE OF BUILDINGS.

"We are not only faced with an extreme shortage of homes, but we do not even have school buildings enough to take care of the education of the nation. There is a lamentable lack of public buildings and it is a fact that in most of the cities office space in buildings erected for this purpose is not to be had for love nor money. I know personally that in New York it is absolutely impossible to get office rooms of any size, no matter how large a price is offered for the space.

"From all these facts it is very evident that now is the time to build. Now is the time to undertake this fundamental and basic enterprise—the "Own Your Home" movement. Of course there are many arguments why building should not go ahead at the present time, included in which are the almost prohibitive costs of materials and labor conditions. During the war, building materials made an advance of 60 per cent., whereas the percentage of increase in other markets was over 100. This advance in building materials was made during the period of the war in spite of the fact that there was no demand for them. Now, however, is the time that they are needed most. There is only 25 per cent. of the building materials on hand at present, necessary to take care of proposed building. It is evident then with this shortage and the demand increasing every day, that prices of materials are not to come down very soon. Rather they will go up. Is not that one good reason why building should be started now?

PRICE DECLINE UNLIKELY.

"Building materials are likely to be higher two months from now than they are at the present day, and the same rule applies to the cost of labor. It is an established fact that we are not going back to the pre-war basis of the cost of labor. Employers throughout the United States don't want labor to be paid on such a basis until living conditions again get back to where they were. However, wages of the building trades did not increase in proportion to those in other industries during the war for the simple reason that there was practically no building during that period and consequently no demand for that class of labor.

COMMUNITIES WILL BENEFIT.

"This movement which you have started is considered by some as a selfish motive. But decidedly it is not. Material men, as well as real estate dealers, naturally will profit as the result of what is being done to promote the opening of building activities, but the results are going to benefit the community as a whole and it is far from true that such a campaign has been started through the selfish motives of a few interests.

"There seems now to be a great cry throughout the country relative to distressing conditions which prevail because of unemployment. It has been my experience, in visiting cities in all parts of the country, that there is no such thing as unemployment. Rather, it is no worse than it was before the war, during normal times. But it may be worse as more troops continue to come back to this country and eventually look for employment and as munition workers are released to find means of living in other lines of endeavor. It is a matter of patriotic endeavor to have jobs for the returning soldiers—for every one that wants work. It is the only way of preventing the possibility of a revolution in this country. And the answer is, 'build now.'"

THE ARCHITECT

Why He Should Be Seriously Considered by the Prospective Builder.

Many prospective builders, having conceived the idea to build, are frequently in the dark as to procedure. They will be most benefited by securing the services of an architect. Some have heard vaguely of architects, while others are unfamiliar with the practices of the architectural profession. Many do not realize it is a profession requiring men of the highest integrity, business qualifications and artistic capabilities, demanding respect and trust as advisers, and sustaining a grave responsibility to the public.

For the enlightenment of those contemplating construction work the following suggestions should prove of value:

1. The prospective builder, who is to spend the money and cannot know just what he is buying, must trust the architect. He should assure himself that the architect is worthy of his confidence; that he is fitted, by study of economy of design, construction and material, to discharge the responsibility placed in him.

2. The owner's interests demand the most available service, suitable design, best construction, and economical expenditure of funds. These are to be obtained only by the employment of a competent architect who is not a luxury, but a necessity, if the owner seeks to safeguard his interests.

3. Architecture in its highest element is a fine art—it is never a trade. The architect's practice is upon the same basis as that of the physician and the attorney, and selection should be on exactly the same principle, upon record for character, integrity, ability and fitness for service.

4. Designing a building is a process of evolution. Nothing but the full working out of the problem can produce this. It is practically impossible for an advance program to be an absolute guide to the best eventual scheme. The data compiled by an architect for such purpose may be quite different from that which at the start suggested itself to either owner or architect. The architect is a sort of clearing-house in adjusting a multiplicity of ideas, wishes, needs, financial and other details.

5. The fallacy of employment of an architect on the basis of the amount of commission does not in any way represent a wise measure. "Penny wise and pound foolish" applies most appropriately to the attempt to practice economy by choosing for cheapness merely to save the fair price for good service. An incompetent man doing work for a small commission might easily lose a large per cent. of the cost of the completed structure in wasteful use of material, inefficient planning, unimproved opportunity, costly and unnecessary construction, with unsatisfactory results; whereas a competent man charging a higher rate for his services could give a very much higher percentage of return for the investment of funds, resulting in an ultimate saving.

6. Architects, like doctors and lawyers, place different values upon their services, and their services likewise vary in merit and results. This should not confuse the owner—the best is likely to be the higher priced.

7. Do not expect gratuitous competitive designs any more than free diagnosis, prescriptions or briefs. Plans are not like merchandise, kept in stock, to fit all individual needs; the model plan exists only for its individual place and condition; each building requires special time, study and labor —the architect's capital.

8. Designs presented in competition are likely to be the product of clever draftsmanship—instruments for working at, rather than with, the owner. With competitive drawings it is difficult to associate the excellence of the design from that of the catchily rendered drawing, or to determine to what extent the one presenting the drawings is to be credited with the design, since their preparation is easily assigned to a picture maker, by whose handwork it is absurd to judge the architect.

9. Rather than limit the selection from among the few designs that a competition may bring forth, it is wiser for the owner to co-operate with his directly chosen architect in careful consideration of all accessible prototypes, alternative studies, and data, the furnishing of which are a part of his professional service.

COST SYSTEM

Used and Advocated by Architect A. F. Wicks of Gary.

To arrive at a method of computing overhead expense there must first be a careful record kept of all salaries paid, office maintenance, equipment, insurance and personal expenses on work and supplies.

This is the basis on which to found a cost unit of operation.

The above items are of a yearly, monthly, weekly and incidental nature and should be reduced to an average weekly cost basis for reasons which will appear later.

For the greater part, the cost records of the various departments form the basis of overhead cost, but it is not necessarily a fixed basis. The overhead cost unit can be adjusted for any week to keep pace with added or decreased running expenses. An increase in your office rent in the middle of the fiscal year, or your stenographer leaving your employ and the place left open for a month, could be directly registered in the overhead and be noted on the time cards for that week and so continue until another change came which would affect the cost unit.

In the above illustration I am considering the stenographic work as part of the office maintenance and entered as a cost along with rent, light and telephone, etc.

In the same way the number of draftsmen you employ would not affect the cost unit, unless by a very large increase you would be forced to additional rented space and more drafting room equipment.

Here is the dividing line of Producers and Non-Producers. The former gives you the direct cost of drawing and superintending and the latter gives cost of operating the establishment, from which the overhead unit is derived.

Where the drafting force is paid by the week and given Saturday afternoon then all costs should be reduced to a weekly basis and again subdivided into a 45-hour week, thereby giving the overhead cost per hour for the entire office force of producers.

This amount will then be divided again by the number of draftsmen and superintendents employed, giving the overhead cost per hour per man. This brings you directly in touch with the exact cost of each hour spent on each job as it passes through the office, the overhead unit remaining the same for each draftsman regardless of the amount of his salary.

For example, if it is found that your overhead cost per hour (average office) is eighty cents and you have four draftsmen, then the overhead unit per man is twenty cents per hour. If one of the men receives sixty cents per hour salary then we have eighty cents per hour to charge on Smith's house for every hour it is in his hands.

If a tracer assists this draftsman and receives twenty cents an hour salary, then we must also charge forty cents against Smith's house for every hour the tracer lingers over it.

If the following week you discharge one draftsman then the eighty cents must be subdivided over three remaining draftsmen, making it twenty-seven cents per man per hour.

It naturally follows in this system that, if Smith's house is the only job going through the office for a period of time, this job must be charged the full tariff. This should be a signal to the "business getter" to get out and hustle among the prospects.

A comprehensive way to keep cost account of each job each week is to enter upon a ledger sheet the total amount of time spent by all draftsmen that week upon that job as represented in cost of hourly salaries plus hourly overhead unit. Enter the gross total amount only, i. e., "Week ending May 23, $9.81," and continuing on as long as the job is in existence, up to final settlement of your own account. By adding this week's total cost to last week's entry, making it an accumulative entry each week, one can tell at a glance over the ledger just how much he tied up in each and every job. At the time when sketches are approved, make a symbol to note this; the same when working drawings are complete and specifications written, the cost to date is registered. You can tell pretty well then if the customary 3 per cent. is sufficient for that much service. And for the time spent in superintending, note this as well. After the work is done you have a complete cost record of the work as it progressed through the office and is comparable to other work at any time without further deductions or mathematics.

To adequately register the time of each draftsman spent on each job a weekly time card is needed. This should be issued each Monday morning and inquiry made from time to time about the keeping of exact records by the draftsman each day.

There should be space for several jobs, say six or eight, and a space marked "office." Many times there is work done about the office which is not chargeable to any client's work, but must be paid for in draftsman's salary. This one item can run away with the whole system if not curbed, however, so do not encourage the draftsman to use this space too freely.

Another card called the Building History and Plan Cost card, which can be filled out with the prominent facts and figures such as owner's name, contractor, how long under construction, total cost, with extras, if any, what the plans cost, how many hours of drafting and of superintending, etc.

In the smaller office where the principal does considerable of the actual drawing and superintending, then he should keep a time card on himself and divide the overhead with his draftsman or carry it alone if he is the "whole force." If he acts merely as manager then he should charge time only and let the drafting force carry all the overhead.

Items constituting the cost of maintaining an office are several, and below is a list of the general items. Every architect should check up his own list and put some figures down to represent cost.

Items of a yearly nature are: Taxes (county, city and income), insurance (compensation, equipment), yearly depreciation on equipment, interest on capital invested, vacations for help, bad accounts.

Those of a monthly nature are: Rent, light, telephone and telegraph, heat, traveling expenses.

Those of a weekly nature are: Office manager, stenographer, specification writer, bookkeeper.

Those of the nature of supplies are: Stationery, printed matter, postage, drawing materials, blue printing, photographic materials, repairs.

The list of equipment should include: Furniture (office, drafting room), books, bound magazines, typewriter, instruments, current magazines, rugs, antiques, pictures, automobile (?), fire-proof safe.

The above items enter into the overhead expense.

The items of draftsmen's salaries, of superintendent's and your own salary are of direct cost and have nothing to do with the overhead.

The above system has been successfully demonstrated for a period of three years and the simplicity of it is more real than may appear in this article. Twenty minutes of the stenographer's time will sum up the whole matter each Saturday noon.

PERSONALS

WAR MEMORIALS

A Chance for Architects to Aid in a Great Work.

A general wave of sentiment favoring the erection of war memorials is sweeping the country and has already surged over Indiana. There is hardly a city or county in the state where projects of this nature are not being agitated. Some communities have organized with a definite end in view and have made appropriations accordingly.

However, in the great majority of cases the agitation is in an embryonic stage and it would be an opportune time to take the matter in hand with the object of erecting, not mere memorials on the spur of the moment, but of producing lasting tributes of beauty to our native sons of the Great War.

Word comes from New Nork that the American Federation of Arts expects to take up the matter of the War Memorial at its regular convention in New York, May 15 to 17, discuss various forms of memorials and adopt some method to combat a foisting upon the country grotesque and abnormal designs that will be labeled memorials.

The Wisconsin Chapter, American Institute of Architects, has taken up the memorial question and has volunteered to offer suggestions and give advice in the matter of location and design of proposed war memorials.

Since the feeling in Indiana is so strong to commemorate the sacrifices and duty nobly done by the Hoosier boys, every architect should give deep consideration to the question of the design of these public tributes to the men who fought, and seek to encourage projects of meritorious conception.

Who is more ably qualified than the architect to suggest and design edifices of this type? He should now step forward, inspired by civic pride, and aid in this move, for his efforts in the end will contribute to the beauty of his city, county and state.

The Indiana Society of Architects can do a great good by organizing the architects throughout the state into committees to work with local memorial associations, thus assuring results that will prove worthy of the cause.

Thousands of dollars will be spent in Indiana in the next year or so along this line of construction and it behooves the architect to do all he can that the money spent will not have been wasted upon some "atrocity".

WELL BUILT HOMES

Citizens to be Encouraged and Educated Along That Line.

Not only to encourage the citizens of the state to build, but to educate them to build well, is the aim of the "Own Your Own Home" campaign committee of the Indiana State Chamber of Commerce.

Every effort is being bent toward the conduction of a general state-wide educational campaign that all citizens may be informed along the lines pertaining to the construction of well built homes, though modest if needs be.

While the state body is back of the move, a special committee headed by Charles A. Greathouse will have charge of the actual work of the campaign. He will have under his supervision four main sub-committees covering finance, survey, city planning and advertising. The chairmen of these committees are: S. H. McClary, Terre Haute, Ind., Survey; Ray S. Trent, Indianapolis, City Planning; F. C. Cline, Anderson, Ind., Advertising; Finance chairman to be announced later.

All communities are to be organized under the general supervision of the State Committee working through local Chambers of Commerce. Where there are no such bodies the state organization will lend its aid to any public spirited citizen or group of citizens who are eager to foster the move.

General publicity messages will be sent broadcast over the state embracing the economic features of building, the practical problems of the cost of various types of houses, methods for financing building operations, standard equipment for health and convenience, the importance of the building site, the community value of city planning, and other issues that are important in the consideration of home construction.

That homes, not mere make-shifts, may spring from this effort the architectural profession has been called into the campaign for consulation and the Indiana Society of Architects has agreed to prepare standard plans and specifications for small residences up $2,000. These plans are to be published and given general distribution gratis. Other branches of the building fraternity have volunteered to co-operate by furnishing reliable information relative to building for the guidance of prospective builders.

There has been a hearty response from individuals and organizations from all over the state, all of whom seem anxious to encourage this "Own Your Own Home" proposition, betokening a general interest all along the line.

The outcome of this effort is bound to benefit the whole community in that renewed building operations will do much to restore normal business conditions. Labor, now unemployed, craftsmen, mechanics, merchants and manufacturers will all reap rewards and a new confidence will be born, the scope of the enterprise is that broad. Lastly, but most important, there will be a happy and contented citizenry living in its own substantial, well designed, modest, individually owned homes, the result of state wide co-operation.

ORGANIZATION

What It Means to the Architect and the Community.

There never was a more propitious time, than in these days of reconstruction, for the architects of Indiana to get together and band themselves into a power that will make itself felt in important questions bearing on the building industry—and its kindred interests. Other professions, trades and businesses are organized and work together to perfect and advance their own individual lines of endeavor. However, the scope of an architects' organization is broader than that for it reaches out beyond the confines of the profession and its workings become apparent in better building laws that make for more substantial homes and structures, safeguard the public and add to the beauty of the community.

That is the aim of the Indiana Society of Architects and it should be encouraged by each individual architect in the state. The only qualification for membership is, "the honorable practice of the profession as a principal."

There are local architects' organizations that have accomplished much good and, what these have done for their respective communities, the State Society can do for the State as a whole if all the architects get back of it and lend their influence.

At this time there are many public building projects, various civic planning schemes and industrial housing propositoins contemplated which, if handled rightly, will mean much for posterity. It is in such cases that the State Society should be so strong and influential that it would be called upon for advice and guidance. Such a state of affairs would not interfere with the individual interests of the architect but would redound to the credit of the profession and correspondingly add to the architects's claim upon the confidence of his fellow citizens. It all would have a tendency to place the architect in his true light before the community, a man commanding respect and trust as a counselor.

This would, in time, make the society a power not to be denied, a power both beneficial and political. There has been little or no concerted action along these lines by the Indiana architects. Doctors, lawyers and other professional men have entered into certain public moves, had their say, been aggressive and carried their point; just so should the architect show an aggressiveness in all questions arising that concerned building in State, county and city.

The architects of Indiana, as a whole, should be so well organized that they could recommend improvements in building laws and standards and "put them across" for the benefit of the citizens. When the legislature meets and legislation is pending that is of vital interest to the safety and health of the people, a solid phalanx of architects thrown into the breach would command respect and attention when their voices were raised and great good could be accomplished.

All these things can be realized by united effort and it is within the power of every architect in the State to contribute to these ends by joining the Indiana Society of Architects and lending his aid by backing up the organization to the fullest extent.

CO-OPERATION

Aim of Indiana Building Contractors in Formation of State Body.

That which Indiana has needed for a long time, a state-wide building contractors' association, is now an accomplished fact and is busily engaged in establishing subsidiary associations in all the larger cities which will operate under the supervision of the State body.

This new organization is known as The Associated Building Contractors of Indiana and has for its object the protection of the building industry and the improvement of building conditions in the State of Indiana, through co-operation of employers connected with the industry; by advocating helpful legislation, regulations and rules; by inculcating principles of justice and equity to govern dealings between contractors and architects, dealers, unions, the general public and other contractors and between members themselves; by striving for fair uniform methods of practice in the business of the industry, and by organizing those engaged in the building business in the State of Indiana, so that a full knowledge of conditions and a strong, sympathetic bond of fellowship may be established, thereby securing unity of action and effort in the accomplishment of a common purpose. But no action shall be taken by the Association to control or in any way deal with prices or the restriction of competition.

Any person, firm, corporation or association, the members of which are actively engaged in any branch of the building industry or connected therewith in the State of Indiana shall be eligible for membership in the Association.

Each constituent body may be represented at the Association's meetings by as many delegates as the local bodies may see fit to send, but no association represented shall be entitled to more than five (5) votes at any meeting, nor shall any city or town not having a local organization represented in the Association be entitled to more than five (5) individual votes, but where a city or town has a local organization recognized by this Association, individuals must become members through their local organization.

The officers of the Association consist of a president, a first vice-president, a second vice-president, a third vice-president, and a secretary and treasurer, who shall serve for one year or until their successors are duly elected and qualified. The office of secretary and treasurer may be filled by one person, who shall give bond to the executive committee if required to do so.

The president shall preside at all meetings of the Association; appoint all committees not otherwise provided for; approve all vouchers issued by the secretary and treasurer for the payment of bills of the Association and attend to all matters usually incumbent upon such officer.

One of the vice-presidents shall preside at the meetings of the Association in the absence of the president and exercise in such absence the duties incumbent upon that officer. In the absence of both president and vice-presidents, the members assembled at any meeting may elect a president pro tem.

It shall be the duty of the secretary to keep a record of all meetings of the Association and committees; he shall collect all dues, giving his receipt therefor; he shall issue such notices and announcements to members and others as he may be directed to do by the president, and perform such other services as may be proper for the good of the Association. He must give such time to the Association as to efficiently carry out its purposes, and he shall be paid such salary for his services as may be fixed by the executive committee.

The treasurer's duty shall consist of keeping a true and accurate account of all receipts and disbursements and making a full and complete statement of all the finances of the Association at the annual meeting. His accounts shall be audited at the annual meeting by a committee appointed by the president.

The executive committee of the Association consists of eleven (11) members, consisting of the elective officers of the Association and six others chosen from the membership. This committee shall have charge of the State Association during the interim between meetings, subject to such direction as may be given at regular called meetings. This committee shall also consider all legislative matters under direction of counsel and have the privilege to engage counsel for and at the expense of the Association, if considered necessary.

BY-LAWS.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Section 1. There shall be an annual meeting of the Association held at such time and place as the executive committee may direct, and the secretary shall notify all constituent bodies and individuals entitled to representation by mail thirty (30) days preceding such meeting.

SPECIAL MEETINGS.

Sec. 2. Special meetings of the executive committee may be called by the president at such time and place as may be designated. Special meetings of the Association shall be called by the president at such time and place as a majority of the executive committee may direct, and five (5) days' notice in writing given all members prior thereto.

QUORUM.

Sec. 3. A majority of all the members of the executive committee at any called meeting shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

At meetings of the Association, ten (10) per cent. of the members qualified to vote shall constitute a quorum of this organization.

ANNUAL DUES.

Sec. 4. The annual dues for the ensuing year will be fixed by the Association at each annual convention, each organization affiliated with the Association being obligated for dues for all members upon their roster at the date of the convention. Individual members shall pay five (5) times the rate fixed for Association members. Annual dues shall be due immediately upon the adjournment of the annual convention and must be paid within thirty (30) days thereafter. Default in paying the dues shall forfeit membership and representation.

ELECTION.

Sec. 5. At the annual meeting of the Association there shall be elected a nominating committee of seven (7) members. It shall be the duty of the nominating committee to nominate a ticket to be voted for during the same session to fill all elective offices of the organization.

A member's ticket may be nominated for any one or all elective officers, provided that such nominations are submitted to the convention duly endorsed in writing by at least fifteen (15) qualified members of the Association.

Sec. 6. The president may appoint committees to perform such duties as he may elect, or as may be required by the convention.

AMENDMENTS.

Sec. 7. The constitution and by-laws may be amended by a two-thirds vote of all delegates present at any annual convention; provided, however, that a notice of such proposed changes or amendments be mailed each constituent body or individual member thirty (30) days previous to the annual convention.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Sec. 8. Call to order by the president.
Roll call.
Minutes of the last meeting.
Report of officers.
Appointment of nominating committee.
Report of committees.
Report of delegates.
Unfinished business.

AROUND THE STATE

A. A. Honeywell, well known church architect, and Architect O. F. Cook, both of Kokomo, Ind., have formed a partnership with offices at 218 Citizens Bank Building.

Architect J. W. Gaddis, Vincennes, Ind., for twenty-five years located at Seventh and Broadway, has removed to a commodious suite, 608-614, in the new eight-story American National Bank Building.

Lieutenant Harry M. Griffin, Connersville, Ind., has returned from service with the engineer corps in England and expects to resume his architectural business. He desires catalogs and building material samples.

It was a cold rainy day and the correspondent rather than wade out through suburban mud to an outlying contractor's place picked up the telephone receiver to secure some information.

Central called in and a wait ensued.

"Hello. Well?" came over the wire.

"Hello, Mr. ———, I am with The Contractor. Any news today?"

"Yes, this is the contractor. What do you want?"

"I say, I'm with The Contractor, a trade journal."

"No, I don't want to subscribe for the Journal, I take the Courier."

"No, no. I am with a building paper."

"I don't need no building paper, I bought all what I need."

"Alright," said the correspondent and hung up, picked up his umbrella and sallied forth from the hotel in quest of news.

When you don't advertise, few know that you are doing business; then some time later you will not know it yourself.

PROMISING

Prospects for Construction in Indiana Continue Favorable.

Building prospects in Indiana showed no diminution during the month of April up to and including April 26, in fact they were growing brighter with each succeeding day with promise of an added volume of business for May.

Actual construction work lagged to some extent due, more or less, to an uncertainty that prevails regarding prices and the outcome of a readjustment of labor demands, however, a general feeling is growing daily that prices are to remain steady in the building material market, and the contractors and labor leaders are endeavoring to straighten out working agreements

Prospective builders are showing a keen interest in their contemplated projects and are pushing the architects for their plans. Some are holding off on account of prices but the average client who has gone so far as to take up the matter of detail plans seems to be convinced that the immediate future holds little or no hope for a price decline and is preparing to place his work in the contractor's hands for bids.

As was to be expected, since the government encouraged public construction work, public officials, state, county, city and township are launching various building projects on which some contracts have already been awarded. Some of the township school work has been temporarily delayed owing to the failure of one of the new appropriation laws to cover the financial requirements of the larger projects contemplated. Other school projects have been held up pending the declaration of the laws by the Governor May 1, but these contracts will, in all probability, be awarded next month.

An encouraging feature to be found in the building field is the appearance of many private projects betokening a faith of owners in the future. These projects, many and varied, while still in a formulative stage have substantial backing and give evidence of early maturity. They have shown themselves, not in one locality, but are scattered all over the state in the smaller towns as well as in the larger cities.

While the building permits are not returnable at this time, the various city building inspectors report an increased activity in their offices and the business passing through these channels should show an increase over last month's figures.

Representatives of the Construction Recorder found all the Indiana architects, from one end of the state to the other, busy; the majority of them held optimistic views regarding building operations for the coming season. They maintained that the Victory Loan campaign would probably retard action for the time being but believed that by June a decided improvement would make itself felt in construction circles.

When one takes into consideration the fact that the architect does not generally report a project until he has it clinched and feels reasonably certain that it will go ahead. The fact that Indiana architects reported two hundred and sixteen projects, plans for which were in course of preparation, should lend color to the building prospects.

That things are moving, in direct contrast to last year's business, is evidenced by the fact that the architects reported the placing of fifty-four general contracts many of which were for projects of considerable size.

A summary of the work reported by Indiana architects during April follows:

Apartments & Flat Buildings	26
Banks & Offices	23
Churches	15
Factories & Warehouses	19
Garages	10
Hospitals & Accessory Buildings	12
Hotels	3
Libraries	2

Total Projects Reported	270

PUBLIC OFFICIALS

Working with Architects to Secure Composite School Construction Ideas.

That the architect can become a power for good in civic affairs if he will but interest himself in the common welfare of the community and get into action has been demonstrated recently in Indianapolis; furthermore, it has been proven that the public officials will heed his voice and listen to his counsel.

Quite an extensive building programme is under contemplation by the Indianapolis School Commissioners that will require the expenditure of several hundreds of thousands of dollars in the next few years.

When this knowledge reached the architects the Indianapolis Architects Association took the matter up with the view of doing all in its power to secure for the city the best possible results in school construction to compensate the taxpayers for the outlay of money.

The interest displayed by the architects as a body was instantly appreciated by the School Commissioners, and resulted in an intense co-operation between the officials and the architects.

Superintendent E. U. Graff recommended various schemes of standardization for building plans to meet various contingencies. He proposed that various features be incorporated in a unit scheme whereby buildings could be so constructed that they could be easily increased from four to eight, to twelve, or to sixteen rooms without in any way interfering with the original building, marring the design or upsetting the symmetry of the general plan.

Having a tangible working basis and backed up by the School Commissioners, the Architects Association sent out a building programme to the local architects inviting them to submit sketches along the lines recommended by Mr. Graff. The object of inviting sketches was to secure the best ideas in school construction along an elastic standard that might be incorporated into additional units when future accommodations were required.

The sketches submitted were not for the selection of an architect, rather, for the purpose of presenting to the commissioners concrete ideas that could be followed and incorporated in buildings when the commissioners were ready to start on their construction programme.

It was the first time in the history of Indianapolis that the public officials, in mapping out a building scheme, had gone so far as to welcome suggestions and seek advice from the architects as a body. It immediately aroused a general interest amongst those of the architectural profession resulting in a submission of sketches that exceeded expectations.

Since the idea of the commissioners was to secure the most feasible plan the architects themselves instituted a process of elimination and after a minute and critical examination, during which each architect was allowed to explain and defend his plan, eight of them, considered the most meritorious by a vote of the architects present, were selected to be submitted to the commissioners. From these the school authorities hope to assemble a composite set of plans to be used as a standard in future building operations.

All of which goes to show what can be done by concerted action on the part of the architects if they will get together and throw their whole weight into public affairs. What has been done in Indianapolis can be done in other cities by local architects if they will come out and take a stand when public building projects are proposed.

It will take time to gain a general recognition but in the end it will insure the best of buildings where an expenditure of public funds is required for such purposes. Furthermore, the publicity gained by the architectural profession in this kind of activity will do more to educate the public as to the architect's duties and worth than any other line of endeavor.

ROAD BUILDING

Many Miles of Improvements Contemplated by Public Authorities.

While all sorts of exhortations are coming from the government officials at Washington to "Build Now" and the general public has conceived the idea that it applies chiefly to building operation, there is another line of construction that is of vital importance and that pertains to road building. True, it does not embrace such a varied line of materials but, good roads, in this day and age, are as essential as new buildings, if not more so, since the motor truck and automobile have come into such prominence in the commercial world.

Short freight hauls between towns have come into vogue and heavily laden trucks can be seen most anywhere in Indiana lumbering along speeding up freight shipments between local points. Then too, the farmer, instead of hitching up old Dobbin and creeping into town with his produce, piles the results of his labors into his automobile, breezes into the county seat and hurries back home, thus saving hours of daylight by the improved method of locomotion and the farm has hardly missed him while he was away on his errand.

To take care of the changed conditions, preparations are being made all over the state for an extensive campaign of road building during the coming summer. In many of the localities efforts are to be made to use hard surfaces such as brick, concrete or crushed stone with a good binder.

Miles and miles of road improvements are under contemplation by the various county officials but no definite action has, so far, been taken as the officials are waiting to see just what action the State Highway Commission means to pursue. Just as soon as this is made clear one can look for a general activity upon the part of the individual counties.

The State Highway Commission, while still lacking the services of a chief engineer, expects to construct approximately one hundred miles of roadways this summer which work will consist mainly of linking up paved roads already constructed between which there intervenes stretches that are unpaved. The probability is that the first work to be done will be along the main highway in the direction of Chicago though no definite plans have been decided.

This road building will call for another line of construction for innumerable bridges will be required, new ones in places and repairs to others already constructed.

Such construction operations will call for a large expenditure of money, will afford employment to thousands of men and work a wonderful benefit to the state in more ways than one.

ANNUAL CONVENTION

Much Importance Attached to A. I. A. Gathering at Nashville.

Representative architects of the country descended upon Nashville, Tenn., the past week to attend the 52nd. annual convention of the American Institute of Architects, considered by many one of the most momentous gatherings ever held by that body.

The importance attached to the assemblage hinged upon the work of the Post War Committee of the Institute. This committee was appointed for the purpose of considering the various conditions arising to face the architectural profession as a result of the war and to recommend and suggest improvements that would increase the efficiency of the architectural practice throughout the country.

Through the courtesy of Governor Roberts the convention sessions were held in the chamber of the House of Representatives at the Capitol. It was an admirable room for the purpose and one that made a strong appeal to the artistic sense of Nashville's discriminating visitors since the Capitol Building, greatly admired by leading architects, is the work of William Strickland, Nashville's pioneer architect, and one of the South's most gifted designers. The various works of Mr. Strickland in Nashville were visited with interest by the visiting architects.

Edward Dougerty, president of the Nashville Society of Architects, who was elected a fellow in the Institute at the last convention, and was recently notified by the general committee on war memorials of the American Federation of Arts, of his appointment as professional adviser for the war memorials for his section of Tennessee, aided by C. A. Asmus, chairman of the committee on arrangements for the Nashville Society of Architects, arranged elaborate details for the entertainment of the delegates and visitors.

The Nashville Art Association in conjunction with the Nashville Art Commission and the Park Commission of Nashville held an art exhibit at the Parthenon that contributed materially to the enjoyment of the visitors.

An automobile tour of the city followed by a visit to The Hermitage, one time home of President Andrew Jackson, where an old time barbecue was served, was the feature of the last day of the convention and formed a fitting climax in the entertainment of the distinguished guests.

Following was the program of the convention:

MEANS TO AN END

Success In Construction These Days Hinges On Contractor.

An essential as the architect is to good construction so is the contractor in his way. The architect conceives the scheme, works out his plans and details to a definite end, an end that depends upon the execution of the contractor. This relation of each to the other has brought both closer togethre in the realization that the success of each depends, more or less, on co-operation, competency and efficient business methods in the pursuit of the construction industry.

The old order of taking chances has passed. The contractor is the means to an end; he is the medium by which the architect attains the result he set out to accomplish, and successful accomplishment necessitates organization and system in the contractor's individual force that the greatest efficiency may be obtained in these days of high wages, costs and the premium placed on time.

Today contractors must be creators to a certain extent, they must be able to create in the finished building the harmony of design that the architect conceived when he started in on his building scheme. All this requires an appreciation of the architect's viewpoint that calls for a true handling of materials to gain the desired effect not all together expressed by the mere white lines of the blue-print.

There is all the difference in the world in construction, a difference easily traceable to the individuality the contractor's force puts into its efforts. Many buildings when completed are the exact counterpart of the plans from which they originated and yet they lack something, they are cold, hard, unattractive; others, counterparts too of the detailed plans, incorporated more, they possessed an inherent beauty not apparent in the drawings and yet each was that for which the architect strived and obtained because the contractor was a creator and caught the subtle idea of harmony fostered by the architect.

It is the efficiency of the contractor's working organization that makes this last feature possible, efficiency that makes the most for service. When the various mechanics can produce artistic effects from ordinary brick laid up in an harmonious blending, can imitate old world effects with modern day stucco and plaster, bring out century old impressions with stone fresh from the ground, attain aged effects with timber and impart a soothing totality in the finished building, that is real service and that is what the contractor is striving for today. Contracting has passed on from mere building, just a transferring of lines from a blue-print to ordinary brick walls, doors and blank windows.

Good contractors are those who are possessed of education and experience, who have learned to appreciate the value of harmony and are enabled to point to well executed structures that signify an ability to interpret plans and specifications and bespeak the efficiency of the contractor.

The contractor no longer guesses, he knows. He can not afford to make a wild estimate and trust to luck to get by. Competition is too keen, a mistake is sure to cost him dearly if he is successful in securing the contract through that mistake in his estimate or, on the other hand, it may lose him a good piece of work, a loss of money too, in fact, a guess costs him any way you take it. He must be right up on current prices, he must be familiar with the freight rates to the localities in which he operates, he must be thoroughly conversant with the labor situation and must know every angle of his business.

This is the sort of contractor the architect is looking for, a man who is thoroughly competent and can be depended upon. Such a man inspires confidence and under such conditions co-operation between architect and contractor is bound to result. The two will work together and be able to amicably adjust little misunderstandings that might arise, all of which can not help but work to the interest of the owner.

This prospect of harmony that is making itself felt in construction circles augurs well for the future. It is going to eliminate the old "pot shot" methods of contracting, the peddling of bids, and general "cut throat" practices, for, under the new efficiency contracting is to arise to a real, substantial business basis.

There is more or less uncertainty prevailing in the building field at present and it is hard to make an accurate estimate on proposed work, but when four of five reliable contractors, backed up by strong organizations, experience and reputation, submit bids to an architect he will feel reasonably sure that there is good faith back of each proposal and will entertain no hesitancy in recommending to his client the acceptance of what appears to be the best figure, knowing that the successful contractor will render the utmost service in the construction of the project at hand. Such procedure is fair to all concerned and is as satisfactory a method to be pursued in modern day construction as any where the result can only be figured on an adequate return from the investment involved.

Contractors themselves have realized their responsibilities, their interests and the necessity of strictly business methods, they are working hard to elevate their avocation by a state-wide organization for the furtherance of methods and ideas that will tend to that end.

By these means contracting will establish itself on a better basis, eliminate incompetency, dishonesty and poor construction and guarantee to the owner, through the architect and contractor, a result that will fully compensate him for the money expended in construction ventures.

POST WAR PROBLEMS

A. I. A. Proposes That All Architects Aid In Solution of Same.

Plans for organization of national scope were adopted at the fifty-second annual convention of the American Institute of Architects at Nashville, Tenn., last week, whereby it is hoped that all professional architects will become actively interested and participate in the effort to solve the post war conditions that have arisen to confront the profession. This was one of the most important features of the convention, and while the Institute endorsed the proposition participation in suggestions and recommendations for an overcoming of these after the war conditions is not confined to Institute members but is open to all practicing architects.

A National Executive Committee is to be appointed to meet in Washington or New York and this body will work in conjunction with subsidiary committees to be organized in the various individual states either by State Architect Societies, or where there are no such bodies, by representative architects. Each committee is to take up the various phases of existing conditions, gather data relating to professional questions and the construction industry, and report to the National Committee who in turn will place all material before the Post War Committee for investigation. The latter committee will endeavor to work out a satisfactory solution for the advancement of the architectural profession and make a report of the result of its deliberations at the next annual convention of the Institute.

There were one hundred and forty-two delegates attending but the assemblage was augmented by the presence of many visiting architects not members of the Institute and, while not voting, these were allowed to enter in to the various discussions.

While there were no important changes made relative to architectural practice as advocated by the Institute, the convention was one of the most interesting and instructive ever held, due to the fact that it was almost entirely given over to a discussion of post war conditions. This feature was conducive to a most varied and enlightening trend of expression when set forth by so many architects gathered together from all sections of the country.

When changes, bearing on the practice of architecture, were proposed the older members claimed that such propositions were not new but had agitated the Institute for the last score of years. It was acknowledged that condtiions had changed but to meet these changes all matters were referred to the Post War Committee for consideration.

The question of advertising came up again for consideration and after a short discussion was turned back to the Board of Directors for further consideration.

A resolution was passed to reduce the age limit for membership among draftsmen to thirty years and all such who can qualify are eligible at that age. The power was given the Board of Directors to reduce the initiation fee if it sees fit, but the dues are to remain the same.

A claim for recognition was raised by the architects when it was brought to their attention that the United States Housing Corporation had decided to omit the author's name when a design was to be published. A telegram was sent to Leroy K. Sherman, president of the corporation at Washington, D. C., protesting against such action. It was represented that the engineers, landscape designers and architects of the country had given faithful and patriotic service during the war, and that the "Institute respectfully, but firmly, maintains that the slight recognition which would be accorded them by the publication of the authors' names is their just due and is a matter of public interest."

At the annual election the following officers were named:

Board of Directors: William J. Sayward, Atlanta; Edward Hewitt, Minneapolis; Frederick Perkins, Illinois; B. Ittner, St. Louis; Henry B. Kendall, Boston; Charles C. Wilson, Columbia, S. C.

The following were named for fellowship: William B. Emerson, New York; N. Max Dunning, Chicago; Robert D. Farquahar, Los Angeles; Ellis-ton B. Bissell, Philadelphia; Walter Killam, Boston; Henry McGoodwin, Pittsburgh; W. S. Richardson, New York; Joseph Llewellyn, Chicago.

PRACTICAL PLEA

Wherin It Is Shown Good Architecture Is Profitable Investment.

There still remain in this world persons who believe that architecture is purely an ornamental profession—that the man who retains the service of an architect to plan and superintend the construction of a building does so because he wants a few additional artistic effects, for which he is able and willing to pay.

The increased cost of building materials has been a pronounced factor in educating the public regarding the true field of usefulness which the architect occupies. A score of years ago a few thousand dollars sufficed to build a large box-like structure, with a great deal of room, but with no architectural merit. Architecture played very little part in the vast majority of buildings built twenty years ago. But when cost multiplied, owners naturally devoted more thought to the underlying requirements of good building construction. The architect is on a very much higher plane than he was a few years ago, and the public is beginning to have a growing conception of the important role the architect should play in the development of the country.

It does not require any considerable knowledge of architecture to appreciate the superior appearance presented by any community in which the services of an architect are utilized in the construction of new buildings.

There is still a good many small communities in the country in which the carpenter and the mason are consulted rather than the architect when a new building is to be constructed. The layman does not stop to consider when he encounters such a community whether the business, public buildings and the residences were planned by a competent architect. He merely knows whether the town is pleasing to the eye—whether it bears the mark of distinction that the prevalence of good architecture imparts to any community. The first impression that he gathers from his initial visit to a town is generally the lasting impression, and more than nine times out of ten it is correct.

For it is usually true (probably invariably true would be a safe statement) that the town in which the representative citizens appreciate good architecture is a better town in which to live than a community in which scant heed is paid to the call of art. The citizens of the town in which the architect is called in to design business buildings and residences—even though the buildings be of small dimensions—have, as a rule, a wider intellectual horizon than men who believe that architecture is merely useless ornamentation, and that the carpenter and bricklayer can create a building of harmonious and attractive design.

Then again, it is true that the citizen who wants an architect to design his building is generally a shrewd and long-headed individual as compared with the man who believes in paring down expenses by eliminating the architect's fee. The architect who is master of his profession must not only plan a building of harmonious design, and attractive appearance, but he must keep constantly in mind the matter of practical every-day utility. There must be no waste corners in the completed building, the interior must meet modern requirements of light and ventilation, the heating plant must be adequate, and yet there must be no waste of material used either in construction or fuel. The building must be planned with close attention to the purpose for which it is intended, in order that the interior arrangement may be completed to the end that the owner, instead of finding after the lapse of a few months or a few years that there are many features of the building with which he is not satisfied, will have an increasing satisfaction in the ownership of the building.

Good architecture increases the value of a building. That is a point that the astute owner always keeps in mind. Five thousand or ten thousand dollars will buy just about so much material in any market. Five thousand dollars' worth of material built into a finished structure of architectural excellence has a higher market value than an equal or greater amount of material used in the construction of a building that is not pleasing to the discriminating eye, and is not arranged with a view to practical requirements. (The Improvement Bulletin.)

POMINENT ARCHITECT

Says Service it Ninety Percent of the Architectual Game.

"A most important feature of the architectural profession is to develop real genuine service on the part of the architect to his client. Personally I am a strong believer in the theory that if an architect is efficient and conscientious and competent in the service that he renders his client he has solved practically 90 per cent. of the problems that most of us have. I think most of our problems are due to lack of proper service to the client either through ignorance, incompetency, indifference or some other reason." Elmer C. Jensen.

INDIANA BUILDING PERMITS

Building returns for the month of April from the building inspection departments of Indiana's largest cities show a decided increase, both in the volume of business transacted and the estimated valuation, over the figures for the same period last year.

While these permits include all construction started during the month, the big work has not really gotten under way and the bulk of the permits cover smaller operations so far. Nevertheless, the returns show a renewed activity in construction circles and afford promise of good business in the days ahead.

Most notable of last month's figures are those from Richmond where there was a big spurt amounting to more than 700 per cent. gain over April, 1918. Gary, too, showed up well with an increase of 300 per cent. as did Terre Haute with its 273 per cent. gain. South Bend, Indianapolis and Ft. Wayne followed in the order named. Figures from Evansville had not come in.

Following is the table of permits issued:

	APRIL, 1919		APRIL, 1918
CITY	PERMITS	EST. COST	PERMITS	EST. COSTS	GAIN	LOSS
Ft. Wayne	79	$124,954.00	39	$ 61,925.00	101%

PRICES

Comparison of War Prices and Those of Readjustment Period.

A study of commodity prices in the United States and certain foreign countries shows that while prices have risen very considerably in this country through the war period, the rise in other countries has been greater. According to the figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the wholesale prices of all commodities in September, 1918, were 107 per cent. over the average for the year 1913. This was the highest figure reached in this country. The price level in Canada, according to the Canadian Labor Department, reached the high point in November—the price level then being 115 per cent. over the 1913 figure. According to the figures of the London Economist, the price level in the United Kingdom was highest in the month of August, being at that time 133 per cent. above the 1913 average. Figures on the increase of prices in France are not available for any time later than June, 1918; however, according to figures published by the Statistique Generale for the month of May there was an increase of 235 per cent. over the 1913 price level. Not only do the countries nearer the scene of actual warfare show greater rises in the price level, but it is also true that in these countries the price began to rise at an earlier date than they did in the United States.

The general rise in commodity prices was accompanied in all these countries by a considerable increase in the amount of money in circulation and in the amount of bank deposits. In this country the average amount of money in circulation per capita in the year 1913 was $34.65. This increased to $56.23, the figure for December 1, 1918, an increase of 62 per cent. There has been a slight decrease since that time, the figure for March 1 being $53.76, which is 55 per cent. above the 1913 figure. During the same time bank deposits in the United States have increased almost three-fold. In European countries, during the war period, bank deposits more than doubled.

Professor Irving Fisher of Yale University published about a month ago a monograph entitled "The New Price Revolution" in which the facts concerning the increase of the amount of money and of credits were brought out, and the statement was put forward that this increase was responsible for the general rise in the price level. Professor Fisher also pointed out that it is extremely unlikely that there will be a decrease of money and credits in either this country or European countries within the next few years, and that the price level will remain permanently high as compared with the pre-war level.

A comparison of the course of prices during the Civil War and the present war shows many points of similarity during the two war periods. The course of prices during the present period of readjustment and the corresponding period following the Civil War show more points of difference than of similarity.

During both wars the wholesale prices of commodities in general rose steadily through the war period. The rise during the Civil War period, taking the year 1860 as the base, runs up to a somewhat higher level than the rise during the present war. In both wars building materials rose in price, but they did not at either time reach levels as high as the price levels of other commodities.

At the beginning of the year 1865, the end of the Civil War being in sight, wholesale prices broke suddenly and violently. During the first six months of the year prices in general fell off 27 per cent. from the high level of January. However, the break in wholesale prices, though unprecedented in violence and accompanied by the unsettling influence of the end of the great war, produced no business crisis or depression. Through the latter half of 1865 prices recovered from the low point until in January, 1866, they stood just 16 per cent. below the level of January, 1865. From the beginning of 1866 prices dropped slowly downward. They did not reach the pre-war level until the year 1878. As is well known during that period of inflated currency, gold was at a premium. However, commodity prices remained above the prices of gold up to and including the year 1877.

Building materials declined in price along with other commodities during the first half of the year 1865. However, the fall was less than in the case of other commodities. Whereas commodities in general dropped 27 per cent., building materials dropped only 14½ per cent. The recovery during the second half of the year was more marked, prices of building materials returning to the level of the last quarter of the year 1864, and remaining at that level for a period of a year before the decline set in. The index figure for the building materials group remained higher than that for all commodities up to and including the year 1874.

The currency was on a distinctly unsound basis in the Civil War reconstruction period. The sharp fluctuations in prices gave rise to much speculation and the opportunities for development of the resources of the country, such as unused land, rivers and harbors, building of railroads, led to over-expansion of business resulting in the financial panic of 1873. This panic was not accompanied by any sharp decline in prices.

As was stated above, it was thirteen years after the Civil War before prices returned to the pre-war level. The principal cause of the return to the pre-war lever was the fact that there was such abundant opportunity for the development of new and more economic methods of production in the shape of new forms of machinery and new kinds of business organizations. These opportunities we do not have at the present day in any measure comparable with the previous period.

A study made of the course of commodity prices during the present period of readjustment, a study based on the quotations of wholesale prices of 313 commodities show that from October 1, to the present time the price level has been declining. At first weekly quotations showed more advances than declines, although the price level fell by a small amount. From November 30 until March 22 there were each week more declines than advances. February 1 showed 59 declines and 9 advances, this being the smallest number of advances noted during that period and at the same time the largest number of declines. The month of January showed the greatest decline in the price level of any month, about 4½ per cent. The excess in number of commodities showing declines over the commodities showing advances has steadily decreased since February 1, until on March 22, the report shows 26 advances and 26 declines. March 29 figures show 20 advances and 54 declines. Of these 54 commoditities showing declines 21 were on steel products, the declines announced being the result of action of the steel committee in conference with the Industrial Board of the Department of Commerce. Previous declines in steel at the beginning of the year had not brought the prices of these products low enough to stimulate business, as they were still considerably above the general price level of other commodities.

Thus, it is seen that through the period from October 1, 1918, to the present time, commodity prices have been going through an orderly process of readjustment. Although there have been many declining prices, at the same time there have been others advancing.

The London Economists's index figures show that from September 1, 1918, (the highest level reached) to March 1, 1919, the price level fell 7.5 per cent.

Of 313 commodities quoted in Dun's Review of March 8, 1919, 140 were quoted at prices lower than they were a year previous, and 126 were quoted higher than they were the year previous. The index figures indicate a reduction in the price level from March 1, 1918, to March 1, 1919, of 4.8 per cent. The commodities which were quoted at prices lower than last year's prices consisted of certain foodstuffs, drugs and chemicals, wool, woolen and cotton textiles, metals and oils. With the exception of steel products, no building materials were quoted at prices lower than last year's prices. Of the commodities which were higher in price than they were at the same time last year, the principal ones were certain foodstuffs, lumber and other building materials, drugs and chemicals, hides, naval stores, oils, paint and tobacco.

An examination of the price records of the Bureau of Labor Statistics shows only two commodities in the list of over 200 that were lower in price in 1918 than they were in 1913. These two commodities are onions and coffee (Rio No. 7). Both of these commodities have increased in prices since the Armistice and are now quoted about 50 per cent. above the pre-war price.

Of the commodities that have been included in the study of the price level, the most marked declines since the Armistice have occurred in the case of lake copper and pig lead. In November, copper was 69 per cent. above the pre-war price. Since that time, it has dropped down to the pre-war level. Pig lead in November was 79 per cent. above the pre-war price, and at the present time it is only 17 per cent. above it. In both cases the cessation of the war left very large stocks of these commodities on hand. Both are usually exported in large amounts and there has been no export demand, consequently, the very considerable declines in prices of these two commodities are not surprising.

In general, the course of prices since the Armistice, as has been outlined, seems to bear out the theory that a new price level has been established.

In the case of iron and steel products war orders for the Entente Allies began to figure largely during the second half of the year 1915. Demands for steel production were greatly increased and prices advanced at that time. Steel prices continued to advance through the year 1916, and in 1917 it developed that a very large proportion of the steel output of the country would be needed for war uses. Prices of steel, iron and coke soared to unprecedented levels until the Government found it necessary to fix the prices on these commodities. The Government's fixed prices ruled the markets from the last quarter of 1917 until the end of 1918.

Most steel prices, before the Government assumed control, were over three times the pre-war figures; some were nearly six times the pre-war figure. The Price-Fixing Committee brought these prices down very considerably. However, the Government's fixed prices were still very high in comparison with pre-war figures. If the average for the period July 1, 1913, to June 30, 1914, be taken as the pre-war base 100 per cent., an average of prices on finished steel products in force at the time of the armistice shows an index of 228. Since the maximum possible production of steel was desired, these commodities being considered as essential for war purposes, it was necessary to fix the prices at such a figure that the producer whose costs were greatest might enter the market and make a fair profit.

The steel industry announced reductions on various items early this year. These reductions brought the index figure on steel products down to 217. The declines, however, were not considered by the buying public as being sufficient to interest them. No orders resulted from these declines, and the steel interests found that further reductions would be necessary in order to stimplate business.

Finally on March 20, after conference with the Industrial Board of the Department of Commerce, the committee representing the steel companies announced a new schedule of prices. The new schedule presented an all-round reduction of 14¾ per cent. from November prices.

At the present time, the index figure for finished steel products is 195, that is to say, these products are now on the average of 95 per cent. above the figure for the period July 1, 1913, to June 30, 1914. Since this average was obtained by a system of weighting similar to that used by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, it is comparable with the figures of that Bureau. The Bureau index number for wholesale prices of all commodities for the month of February was 197. It is thus seen that the action of the conference on steel prices had the effect of bringing these products down to the general level of all commodities.

At the time the new schedule on steel was announced, the steel companies stated that these prices would prevail for the rest of this year. It was also stated that the prices were the lowest possible compatible with the present wage-scale. At the present moment, owing to the desire of the Railroad Administration to secure lower prices if possible, there seems to be some doubt as to whether present steel prices will stand. It is hoped that this matter will be settled in the near future.

There was this difference in the conditions that determined prices on steel, and on basic building materials. In the case of materials regarded as not essential, such as most of the building materials other than steel, whether the price was fixed by the Government or in the open market, this price was not sufficiently high to keep all producers in the market, simply because the maximum production was not required by the wartime needs of the country. In fact, construction itself, as well as production of various building materials, was specifically curtailed by Governmental order.

Figures of the U. S. Geological Survey show that actual production of common lime in 1918 was 20 per cent. less than in 1917. Portland cement produced in 1918 was 23 per cent. under the 1917 figure. Lumber was reduced 19 per cent. in output. Common brick in 1917 was 21 per cent. under 1916. It has been estimated that in 1918 the production of common brick was less than half the 1917 figure.

As a consequence, the markets are understocked rather than overstocked in these commodities. If any one of these commodities had been considered as essential as steel, the Government would have been obliged to fix the prices on them at figures high enough to encourage every producer in the country to run his plant at maximum capacity with a guarantee of a reasonable profit on his output. In that case the prices on these commodities would have reached much higher levels than they actually did.

Lumber as a group during the last quarter of 1918 was 73 per cent. higher in prices than in the pre-war period, July 1, 1913 to June 30, 1914. The building materials group, including lumber, but not including metal products, was 84 per cent. above the pre-war figure. This seems large, but as compared with 113 per cent. increase on commodities other than building materials, the increase seems justifiable. The Farm Products group showed an increase of 116 per cent. at the same time.

It is interesting to compare the Farm Products group with the Lumber group. The indices show that at the beginning of the year a farmer could exchange a certain amount of his produce for 25 per cent. more lumber than the same amount of produce would have brought him in the year preceding the war.

A composite index for all building materials including steel, as well as lumber and the rest, would show an increase of 93 per cent. over the pre-war period for the last quarter of 1918. At the present time the index would be 189.

Building material prices increased somewhat more in the east than in the middle west, and in the west. Since the opening of the year lumber has increased somewhat in price. Common brick have also increased in the New York market. On the whole the group of basic materials not including lumber or steel has remained practically stationary, declines in some items being offset by advances in others. From all indications the prices of building materials on the whole do not seem to be subject to any declines of consequence in the future.

An attempt has been made to estimate the increase of construction costs. With the co-operation of the U. S. Housing Corporation, a comparison of the cost of a two-family wood-frame and stucco house, as between the present time and 1915, has been made, prices prevailing in the neighborhood of New York being used. This estimate showed an increase in cost of construction for this type of building of 48 per cent.

An architect in St. Paul, Minn., has furnished the cost per cubic yard of hospital buildings of reinforced concrete construction for each year from 1911 to 1918. These figures were based on actual buildings, all of the same type, all by the same architect and the same contractor. They show that the 1918 building cost was 80 per cent. more than the 1915 building. The cost today should be appreciably less than this, with reduced prices on reinforcing material, and increased efficiency of labor.

The Engineering News-Record of February 20, published an estimate on a steel-frame office building in the city of Chicago, showing an increase in cost of 87 per cent. over 1915. This would be reduced somewhat now as a consequence of the reduced cost of structural steel.

The subject of increased construction costs is very important, and the Division of Public Works and Construction Development is now investigating this phase of the problem, with the hope of having more complete data on it in the near future.

In conclusion, after a somewhat extended study of prices, it is the opinion of the Division of Public Works and Construction Development that a new price level has been established by economic conditions attending the world war; and that economic forces appear to have already acted to stabilize prices at a level below which they are not likely to fall by any appreciable amount in the near future. It is believed that the growing confidence in the future of business in this country, evidence of which is seen on all sides, is well justified by the facts that have been learned through the study of the price situation. Evidence of the stability of business today is the fact that during a five months' period of stagnation, the number of business failures have been unusually low.

At the present time there is less concern over high prices than there is with regard to the stability of prices. It appears that the wisest business men are those who decide now to go ahead with the construction of buildings and the production of goods; the need for both forms of activity are more imperative now than ever before.

(From an address delivered before New York Chapter, A. I. A., by T. S. Holden, of Division of Public Works and Construction Development, United States Dept. of Labor.)

UNITY OF ACTION

Contractors' Association Settles Menacing Disputes and Saves Construction Industry.

What unity of action amongst the building contractors means to the construction industry has been clearly demonstrated at Indianapolis this spring and unquestionably has prevented a serious tie up that would have affected architects, contractors, mechanics and material supply men and cost thousands of dollars to those engaged in building operations, to say nothing of the inconvenience that owners would have suffered.

Construction activities had revived strongly with a good volume of business in prospect when suddenly a jurisdictional dispute arose between the iron workers and carpenters over the handling of certain material equipment in a large plant in course of construction. The argument waxed warmer daily; consultations but widened the breach. Finally the iron workers called upon the Central Labor Council to back them up and, since the carpenters were not affiliated with the Council, the threat was made to call out the various allied trades on a general strike.

It was at this menacing moment that unity of action on the part of the contractors saved the day. The Building Contractors Association, the membership of which includes sixteen crafts, having been organized for the purpose of the improvement of the building industry and building conditions, realized the seriousness of the situation and stepped in to prevent a general stoppage of work.

Inspired by the principles of justice and equity to govern dealings between unions, the allied contractors took up the dispute in an endeavor to settle matters by arbitration and arrive at an amicable understanding. It was a long hard pull and for a time it looked as if there could be no solution. The contractors held to their purpose and slowly but surely overcame the various contentions to at last pacify both iron workers and carpenters. The threatened strike was called off and the promising building outlook for spring and summer was saved.

While the above situation was the most threatening to arise, still, the Building Contractors Association figured in another dispute on a smaller scale that had all the indications of a strike to retard building. The Boss Painters and their employes were involved in a wage dispute that was fast growing to menacing proportions to affect the allied building crafts when the Building Contractors Association was again called upon, took matters in hand and brough about a satisfactory settlement.

Had it not been for the co-operation of the various contractors who make up the membership of the association a serious split would have occurred in the building trades field, the effect of which would have been far reaching.

It is to meet just such situations that brought about the organization of the Associated Building Contractors of Indiana, a body that is ready at all times to act in conformity with local associations to protect the construction industry and the individual rights of those engaged therein; to encourage fair methods of practice and safe-guard the interests of the owner and public.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE

Proposed for all those Interested in Construction Industry.

The directors of the National Federation of Construction Industries are considering calling a National Conference of representatives concerned with the Construction Industry, consisting of manufacturers, distributors, consumers, labor, agricultural, transportation and finance. The manufacturers would include representatives from the 128 different crafts, or one-third of the industries of the United States, directly or indirectly producing construction materials. The distributors would include representatives of wholesale and retail interests, contractors, architects and engineers, supply houses, jobbing houses, builders' exchanges and others. The consumers would include representatives from 134 Granges, 24 Farmers' National Headquarters, 29 National Farmers' organizations, 221 state agricultural associations, national and state real estate associations, Federal and State Highway Commissioners, Building Commissioners and all other organizations of consumers which are interested in construction. Organized labor would include representatives from both national and state organizations. Finance would include representatives of trust companies, building and loan associations, bond companies and other banking institutions concerned with construction. Transportation would include representatives of the U. S. Railway Business Men's Association and of individual steam and electric roads.

The Directors of the National Federation of Construction Industries have been working for several weeks upon the details of the conference, and meetings of representatives of a number of the groups concerned have been held, and others will be held preliminary to the final decision of the Directors to call such a conference.

The Federation has also been sounding out construction business sentiment throughout the United States, and many letters coming into the Federation's offices indicate that these business men are apprehensive because of present uncertainties and indecisions of the construction business. This condition has resulted in an unwarranted state of unemployment and in many cases has caused inability to re-employ returning soldiers.

On February 1, 1919, there were 355,488 idle cars in the United States and an excessive number of engines which had been leaded because of a lack of business. This unfortunate situation has developed in spite of the fact that this country has a wealth of Two Hundred and Sixty-five Billions of Dollars—a greater wealth than that possessed by the four next wealthiest nations of the world combined—with a gold reserve of considerably more than one-half of the gold of the world.

For the past two years building construction in the United States, except for the War Department, has been practically at a standstill, and it is estimated that the delayed construction program includes from six hundred to a million houses needed immediately to meet the requirements of the people of this country. Large sums of money have been appropriated for public improvements, both by the Federal Government and by individual States, but the officials responsible for the expenditures in many cases hesitate to proceed with the work authorized.

It appears that this condition is one of psychology rather than one of materials. Labor is available, money is at hand, material is abundant and the need for construction is pressing. All of the elements for active business are present, but construction does not resume. Many of the people of the United States seem to feel that we shall revert to pre-war prices, and they are apparently postponing construction until the reductions in prices are realized. An examination of the history of prices shows clearly that after none of the wars of modern times, in any part of the world, have price reverted to the pre-war status.

The increase in prices in the United States during the recent war has been much less than in other countries, except Australia and New Zealand. Not only in Germany and Austria, but in neutral Europe and among our allies have prices advanced, in many cases far beyond those now prevailing in this country. The reason for our present increase in prices is apparent, if we will review our economic role. We have greatly increased our gold reserve. But we have not increased the service or the supply of goods to be exchanged therefor. As a result, more money is required in the purchase both of labor and commodities. On the other hand, prices have increased in Europe because of the great destruction of property and life which has been attendant upon the war. This world-wide after-effect upon prices is apparently the result of established economic law. The condition was true in Europe in the 16th Century and it has been true ever since. With a greatly increased gold reserve, having over Seven Hundred Millions of Dollars of free gold in this country in addition to that needed to meet the legal requirements of our present banking system, and with commodities not equal to normal demands, prices are not only higher than they were before the war, but they give promise of having reached a new permanent level.

This information, however, has not filtered down to the mass of the people, and the Directors of the Federation, therefore, feel that they should call together, for the first time in the history of the United States, a conference where all of the parties directly or indirectly interested with the Construction Industry may come to an understanding relative to the new economic conditions with which the United States is now confronted.

The difficulty of carrying on a conference of this size can hardly be exaggerated. It would be necessary to hold specialized group meetings, general group meetings and meetings of the whole. It would be necessary to hold individual group meetings of construction manufacturers, of construction contractors, of labor interested in construction, of representatives of the financial interests, and so on. It would also be necessary to hold meetings of two or more of these groups together. And, finally, it would be necessary to hold group meetings of all representatives concerned with building construction, highway construction and other departments of the industry.

It is believed that such a conference would devise a construction program applicable to present conditions. The Directors of this Federation—potentially representing one-third of the business firms of the United States, and interested primarily in the construction industry—feel that existing class distinctions are un-American; that new standards of carrying on the construction business must be formulated; that the construction industry must be democratized; and that unity of purpose and fairness of action will result if the representatives of the several groups concerned will sincerely seek the solution of our present difficulties. Our trouble seems to be a lack of information and of understanding, an exaggeration of the importance of group interests and a mutual distrust, arising chiefly from a lack of contact and acquaintanceship between the members of the several groups. We have all acknowledged the solidarity of the human race, but we have failed to recognize the necessity of applying the same principle to business.

Mr. W. H. Manss, former Director of the War Service Committees of the War Industries Board, who conceived the idea which prompted the Directors to consider arranging for such a conference, illustrates this thought by means of a perfect or isosceles triangle, of which agriculture is the base, labor one side and commerce the other side. If the value of any angle or the length of any side is changed, the perfection of the triangle is destroyed and all suffer. There is a balance and harmony which must be maintained between the several related elements. In an autocracy this balance might be maintained by mandate. For the continuation of a democracy, this balance must be preserved by the mutual effort of those interested. The present unfortunate conditions of business are due to the fact that labor, agriculture and commerce have failed to apprehend fully their necessary inter-dependence. This is not to be wondered at when we remember that, hitherto, agricultural societies have met by themselves; organized labor by itself and commerce by itself, and each has taken counsel how best to advance its own interests without obtaining the advice or information of, or considering the effect upon the other two. This one-sided view is the cause of many of our difficulties and estrangements.

Through such a conference as had been proposed, it is expected that the farmers, the workmen and the business executives, interested in construction, who jointly are the producers and the consumers of construction commodities, would, by candid discussion and sincere examination of the views expressed by the others, arrive at the conclusion that the democracy of the construction industry is as essential as that of the Government. What American labor, agriculture and commerce needs today is not paternal supervision, but a realization of the sense of cooperative endeavor. As Americans we do everything together except in business, and it is the opinion of the Directors of the National Federation of Construction Industries that, through such a democratization of the Construction Industry, there will be created in this industry a mutual trust, respect and spirit of co-operation between hitherto separated classes.

Since the Construction Industry of this country annually produces over Three Billion Dollars of additional permanent wealth, is the largest consumer of all materials, and affects the largest number of interests, the Directors of this Federation feel that the democratization of this industry should properly be the first undertaken because of the immediate, farreaching beneficial effects.

The same spirit of faith in our nation, unselfishness, and unity of thought and action, which gave us the victories of war, will solve the problems of peace.

ARTISTIC CONTRIBUTION

Made by Building Fraternity to Welcome Home Celebration.

Attended by no blare of trumpets of loud publicity those engaged in the construction industry at Indianapolis got into the Rainbow Home Coming Celebration and acquitted themselves artistically and creditably, few knowing the part they had contributed to the welcome extended to the boys when they came home.

When the plans for decoration were made known the Architects Association of Indianapolis held a friendly competition to secure a suitable design for a triumphal arch not to cost over thirty-five hundred dollars. When the selection was made the successful architect donated his services and presented to the War Chest Committee full detailed drawings.

Not to be outdone by the architects the contractors got busy and donated their services, to be followed by the material supply men who furnished the lumber and stucco, next came the carpenter, lather, plasterer and hod carrier, all of whom donated a day's service.

The result of this demonstration of public spirit was the artistic memorial arch that sprang into being at Meridian street and Monument Circle, practically a gift of the building fraternity who through the war displayed its patriotism in various fields and when the noise of the battle had ceased stepped forward to contribute unstintedly to the tribute to be paid to Indiana's battle heroes.

AROUND THE STATE

Architect J. M. Le Vee, recently of Chicago, Ill., has removed to Gary, Ind., and opened an office at 209 Lee bldg.

Archt. W. E. Russ, Indianapolis, formerly located at 1405 Merchants Bank Bldg., has moved his office to second floor Meridian Life Bldg.

Architect L. H. Osterhage, Vincennes, has admitted to partnership Byron Sutton, the firm to be known as L. H. Osterhage & Byron Sutton, Architects, with offices at 30-32 Second National Bank Bldg. Mr. Sutton recently returned from Camp

Knox, Ky., where he was engaged in war construction work for many months. He also has been awarded license to practice architecture in Illinois, having succeeded in passing the examination conducted by the State Architectural Examining Board.

Lieut. Kidd of the Aviation Department, returned from service, is now connected with the E. E. Dunlap Company, Kokomo.

Archt. Walter Scholer, formerly connected with the architectural firm of H. L. Bass & Co., has launched out for himself and opened an office at 801 State Life Bldg. He is desirous of securing catalogs and building material samples.

Lieut. J. Edwin Kopf, back from service with the Engineer Corps in England, and Lieut. K. K. Woolling, late of the Aero Branch of the Army, have formed an architectural partnership and opened an office at 405 Pythian Bldg., Indianapolis.

ARCHITECTS TO MEET

State Society to Assemble at Indianapolis June Twenty-Eighth.

The attention of all Indiana architects is called to the fact that the regular meeting of the Indiana Society of Architects will be held at Indianapolis, Saturday, June 28th, and it is the hope of the officers of the organization that all members will endeavor to arrange matters so they can attend.

Plans are being made to make this one of the most important gatherings ever held by the architects of the state since, with a resumption of construction, there are many features to be considered from the architect's viewpoint to meet conditions that have arisen at the dawn of the reconstruction period.

Never was there a better time for the architects to get together to discuss various angles of the architectural profession that will tend to the betterment of their calling.

It is a time to take stock and prepare for the future. As a result of the war most of the professions suffered, yet few to the extent that did the architectural profession. Construction fell away to nothing except government work, and now that it has been resumed the moment is propitious for the architect to come forward and convince the public of his actual worth, assume his real position as counselor, as a man deserving of confidence and recognition, as a real aid in his individual community.

A gathering of architects from all over the state should be productive of suggestions for good that will affect the efficiency and practice of the profession, encourage those therein engaged and, in time, accrue to the benefit of the public generally.

It is to be the sense of the meeting to analyze the situation thoroughly and endeavor to work out and arrive at conclusions that will prove beneficial to the architect and place him and his profession in their true relationship with the new order of conditions as they are today.

Among the things to be considered is service in its strictest sense—service that is broad, all encompassing and will make for a better relationship between the architect, contractor and owner.

Now is the time for the architects to advance suggestions that will be the means of proving by practice that the architect is not a luxury, as was presumed by many prospective builders in the olden days, but a necessity, both practically and economically.

Then too, an important phase to be studied that will afford mutual benefit is the position of the architect as a citizen, a man not aloof from his fellowmen, but one who takes an active part in the affairs of his community and can, by his professional knowledge make himself a power when various improvements are under contemplation, or laws are proposed as regards construction that will affect the health and safety of the public.

Co-operation between the architect and others engaged in the construction industry offers a wide field for discussion and should afford a means of bringing forth helpful hints as to how this co-operation may be extended to create a greater efficiency in the interests of the construction industry.

Much has been said of ethics and the relation of one architect to another. A prominent Indianapolis architect whom the writer always looked upon as the strictly ethical type once remarked, "you can't tell another man how he should conduct his business any more than you can legislate him into heaven. You can talk to him and by a little effort reach an understanding and when an understanding has been reached, when each knows the other, the ethics will take care of themselves." This is another side of the profession that will be entered into, "the relation of the architect to his fellow-architect."

In addition to the above discussions an effort is to be made to have some prominent outside architects to visit Indianapolis to address the meeting.

Entertainment features are being prepared for the visitors, but as for that the committee is "mum."

Every effort is to be made to make the meeting a most interesting affair, so don't arrange to let any contracts on that day; instead, prepare to visit Indianapolis. Remember the day, Saturday, June 28.

SCHOOL CLASSIFICATION

Proposed for All Those Interested in Construction Industry.

The following report submitted by the committee on school building measurements was adopted and passed at the Fifty-second Annual Convention of the American Institute of Architects:

For the purpose of obtaining comparable data upon the educational utility and cost of school buildings, they shall be classified, measured, and defined as follows:

Educational Classification: School Buildings shall be classified, educationally, as—

Lower Elementary,
Upper Elementary,
High, or Secondary.

Lower Elementary: Shall be defined as a building containing class and kindergarten rooms, together with the usual accessory rooms, such as principal's office, teachers' rooms, play rooms, toilets, etc., and used for the lower elementary grades only.

Should a school building of this type be provided with assembly room, gymnasium, or other special rooms, it shall fall into the next classification.

Upper Elementary: Shall be defined as a building containing lower or upper elementary grades, and in addition to the regular class and accessory rooms, an assembly hall, gymnasium, and such special rooms as may be included for upper grade or special work, which may include elementary science, elementary industrial training and household arts.

This classification would thus include the Junior High School, the Elementary Industrial or other types of special elementary schools.

High or Secondary: Shall be defined as a building containing class rooms, recitation rooms, laboratories, and such special rooms as are necessary for classical technical, commercial, industrial, household arts, normal, agricultural, or other purposes required for secondary or junior college education.

Construction Classification.

A. Class—A building constructed entirely of fireproof materials, including its roof, windows, doors, floors and finish.

B. Class—A building of fireproof construction in its walls, floors, stairways and ceilings, but with wood finish, wood or composition floor surface, and wood roof construction over fireproof ceiling.

C. Class—A building with masonry walls, fireproof corridors and stairways, but with ordinary construction otherwise, i. e., wooden joist partitions, roof and finish.

D. Class—A building with masonry walls, but otherwise ordinary or joist construction and wood finish.

E. Class—A frame building constructed with wood above foundation with or without slate or other semi-fireproof material on roof.

Note: Should buildings of any of the above classifications be erected without complete ventilating systems or other mechanical equipment, due note should be made of such fact in reporting its cost data.

Cost Units.

To determine utility, or the per capita educational efficiency of the building, obtain the cost per pupil.

To determine construction cost of building obtain the cost per pupil.

The divisor to be used to determine the cost per pupil, shall be determined by the number of pupils normally accommodated in rooms designed for classes only. In arriving at the number of pupils, special rooms are to be figured at the actual number of pupils accommodated for one class period only. Auditorium or assembly rooms are to be ignored, but gymnasiums may be figured for one or two classes, as the accommodation may provide. No gymnasium, however, shall be accredited with two classes, if below 40 by 70 feet in size.

Cost per cubic foot—To obtain the cube of a school building, multiply the area of the outside of the building at the first floor level by the height of the building from six inches below the general basement floor to the mean height of the roof. Parapet walls, stacks and other projections beyond the mean height of the roof, as well as balconies and porches not contributing to the actual usable floor of the building, are to be ignored.

Where portions of the building are built to different heights, each portion is to be taken as an individual unit and the rule as above applied.

Cost Items.

The cost of school buildings shall be divided into four general items:

First—Cost of land and grading.

Second—Cost of building.

Third—Cost of furniture and fixed equipment.

Fourth—Cost of architects', engineers', brokers' and supervision services.

First—Cost of land and grading should include the cost of the site and the necessary grading to place it in condition to receive the building. Should the site be abnormal and require piling, filling, quarrying, or other unusual expenditures to place it in normal condition to receive the building, such costs are also to be charged up against the site and not the building.

Second—Cost of building should include (a) general contract and any sub-contracts pertaining to the general construction of the building, as, for example, excavating, masonry, fireproofing, steel construction, carpentry, cabinet work, sheet metal work, roofing, painting, etc.

(b) All contracts for electrical work, plumbing, vacuum cleaning, sewage disposal, heating and ventilating, clock systems, elevators, or any other contract for any part of the building not included above, necessary to complete the same, ready for occupancy.

(c) The cost of all site improvements, such as walks, drives, yard paving, fencing, and landscape gardening.

ARBITRATION WINS

Gary Contractors and Employes Settle Wage Question Satisfactory.

The building industry at Gary, which for a time hung in the balance, threatened by a strike of the various building trades, has been saved through the intervention of the Builders and Traders Exchange. All labor difficulties in the construction field in that section of the state have been adjusted satisfactorily.

Wage demands of the numerous building crafts gave every indication of seriously jeopardizing the promising construction prospects, for the men and the bosses were drifting farther and farther apart, until matters had assumed a serious aspect.

At this juncture the Builders and Traders Exchange offered its services as a means of arbitration. The offer was accepted, and the various factions submitted their grievances, trade by trade. After spirited negotiations, which, at times were heated, compromises were effected and work now promises to proceed unhindered.

It was just another case of where organization triumphed over individuality and preserved the interests of the whole. The membership of the Builders and Traders Exchange is composed of contractors of all branches of work required in building industry, and when the strike menace appeared they all united in an effort to effect a suitable solution that would bring about conditions that would afford the greatest amount of good to the majority of those engaged in construction work. This hearty co-operation accomplished its purpose, and Gary now faces a year of active building operations.

BIG IMPROVEMENTS

Indicate Faith of Manufacturers in the Immediate Future.

There is every evidence, as the weeks pass, of a growing confidence in the future on the part of the prospective builders. Especially is this true of Indiana manufacturers who are actively planning extensive improvements. From all sections of the State comes word of new industrial building.

Already this spring work has been started in Indiana that will involve the expenditure of a vast sum of money. The largest project is that planned at South Bend by The Studebaker Corporation, which concern has awarded contracts for the construction of immense factory improvements, work on which has been started. This company also is about to launch a large housing scheme to take care of its thousands of employes. This programme has been mapped out along the latest methods developed to the highest degree, to meet the housing problem in industrial centers.

That there is no lack of confidence in the future also has been demonstrated at Kokomo within the past few weeks by the Haynes Automobile Co., who awarded a contract for the construction of a large factory addition to cost $450,000.

Another contract for $300,000 was recently placed at Bloomington for an addition to the Showers Furniture Co. This is the first of three units that are to be erected by this concern.

An industrial project of note that has just been started is the six-story addition to the Starr Piano Co., Richmond, that will cost $150,000.

Several manufacturing concerns at Evansville have awarded, or are about to award, contracts for buildings to increase their capacity.

The above represents the investment of private capital and yet there is other work that bears mentioning where construction activity is being considered; it relates to the many public buildings now under way.

Though the contract was awarded earlier in the spring, the $175,000 Court House at Rockport comes under the head of new business since construction is now getting into full swing. This was the project that "started the ball rolling."

The State got into the game early in May by letting contracts for the erection of two large pavillions at the State Fair Ground at Indianapolis, the cost of which will total $240,000. Recently a contract for approximately $70,000 was awarded for an addition to the State Epileptic Asylum, New Castle, and further improvements are to be made there requiring the construction of a women's colony consisting of thirteen buildings.

Plans have been completed, or are in course of preparation, for numerous school houses, but the outcome of this work is problematical since the tax board has taken matters in hand and is inclined to call a halt on burdening the various communities with additional bond issues to meet this construction work. However, many of the contemplated improvements are essential and the probability is that these contracts will be awarded in the very near future.

Private owners seem to have caught the spirit of the times and are proceeding regardless of cost, fully convinced that prices have reached a stability with small evidence of further reductions. Stores, apartments, banks, moving picture theaters and miscellaneous projects of considerable consequence are now being built, or contracts for them have just been awarded, while the building permits show a great activity along the lines of dwelling construction, remodeling and the smaller scope of work.

May has been a good month as a starter for building activity in Indiana, and yet greater than this is the re-awakened confidence in construction that has developed this month, evidenced by the contemplated projects that have appeared and promise an early maturity.

AROUND THE STATE

Architect Guy Mahurin, Ft. Wayne, has returned from government war work service, Washington, D. C., and opened an office at 519 Lincoln Life bldg.

A. K. Hofer, engineer, and L. W. Larimore, architect, have formed an engineering and architectural partnership with offices at 509-510 Bass block, Ft. Wayne. Would be pleased to receive catalogs and building material samples.

BIG OPPORTUNITY

Open to Indiana Architects to Advance the Profession.

What the architects in other states have done to further the interests of the architectural profession, increase its efficiency and service and gain for it public recognition can be accomplished in Indiana if the architects will get together and work to that end.

In the neighboring states of Illinois and Michigan the architects have obtained a real prominence and affected strong organizations that are forever on the alert to advance the profession, protect its interests and suggest legislation that from a construction angle is of vital consequence to the health and safety of the public. These organizations are zealous in their efforts to protect the individual and collective interests of the members of the profession and gain for them their due place in the esteem and respect of their fellow citizens. Both in Illinois and Michigan the architects, through their societies, were instrumental in securing the passage of architects' registration laws which have proven of great benefit both to the profession and the building industry.

It was only through thorough co-operation on the part of members of the profession in each state that it was possible for the Michigan and Illinois architect to gain the advantage that the license laws afford him in his respective community. Indiana architects may reap the same benefits if they only display the same interest in their chosen calling, cast selfish individuality aside and combine their efforts in an endeavor to attain a unity of purpose that will work, in the end, to the good of all concerned.

There is much room for improvement in Indiana both in the architectural professional field and along the lines of legislation as they affect the construction industry. As it is now there is little or no responsibility attached to the architect. He can operate as he sees fit and, except in the larger cities where a certain check is placed upon him by the building inspection departments, the unscrupulous architect can get by with little regard for service to be rendered to the client. Such a state of affairs puts a premium on incompetency for the conscientious architect with his profession at heart can not compete with the careless architect and in many cases is eliminated from consideration by owners who seek to save a few dollars in commissions, failing to realize that it is service as much as anything else that they are buying when they retain an architect.

Laws should be passed making an architect responsible for his work. Doctors, lawyers and other professional men are licensed to practice and when they fail in the proper performance of their duties they are prevented by law from further practice.

At present the architect in Indiana is not held to account by any law if he fails in the strict performance of his work though he builds opera houses, churches, schools, stores and office buildings that at various times house thousands of human beings. The proper construction of these buildings is of serious moment to the safety and health of the general public which is forced to frequent these various structures.

Much harm has been done the architectural profession by the careless architect whose work was faulty, for the owner has been dissatisfied, has berated the profession as a whole, aired his disappointment in public and counseled his friends to steer clear of architects if they are going to build.

Architects for their own good and the protection of the profession should combine and advance laws that would make the architect answerable for his work. Such laws would work no harm to the real architect, instead he should welcome such legislation as it would tend toward the advancement of the profession by requiring a reasonable degree of competency and would put all architects on a common level in the performance of service.

The Indiana Society of Architects offers the means for the accomplishment of the above and should be encouraged in its efforts to attain such results.

Now is the time for the Indiana architects to get busy, enter into the spirit of the times and do all in their power to work for the good of the profession and the encouragement of better construction now that there is a universal revival of building.

There are many important factors entering into this period of reconstruction, features of vital interest to the architect. These are the things that are to be taken up for discussion at the convention of the Society at Indianapolis, June Twenty-Eighth, and should prove of decided interest to all members of the profession in the State. Think things over, then prepare to attend the convention and lend your voice and aid in the good work the Society has set out to accomplish.

This is the first meeting of the state architects organization since the outbreak of the war and it is hoped the architectural fraternity will turn out in good force to participate in the annual election of officers. There is much work to be done in the coming year, plans for which are to be mapped out at the approaching meeting.

HOUSING PROBLEM

Result of A. I. A. Competition to Reach Best Solution.

While the indispensable contribution which architecture has to make to the world-wide problem of the house is of the highest importance, the experiences of the last half century, in all the leading nations of the world, have demonstrated beyond further doubt that society must now and in some manner grapple with and correct those fundamental economic laws which have produced their cycles of congestion and slums in all our communities. Until this is done, architects cannot take any great part in the solution of the house problem, the present acuteness of which has been so greatly demonstrated and emphasized by conditions arising as a result of the war and war preparation.

While the numerous "small house" competitions of the past have done much toward stimulating an interest in the question and have exercised a certain influence upon a small fragment of the small house development in this country, they have contributed nothing at all toward an ultimate and more universal answer to that question which they approach only in a superficial way. Land and building speculation continue to be the prime motives behind all housing undertakings, with the exception of those where there is sought a certain result which may be measured in terms of labor stability.

As a result, a big barrier is continually piling up between society and the democracy which is professed to be sought in this country, while communities, one and all, are given over to speculation, to congestion, and to all the evils of unchecked development, in which the individual is permitted to take his profit, no matter what loss or damage he may cause the community.

To combat the above condition, stimulate interest in the housing problem and offer a positive and constructive program, which in some manner might serve as a basis for future effort along this line, the American Institute of Architects organized an American competition for the best solution of the house problem.

The competition was in three parts: First—The Social Purpose. Second—The Economic Method. Third—The Physical Plan. All competitors were required to submit the following: Under Part 1, a thesis, in which it was to be set forth the social purpose which house-building should seek to attain. Under Part 2, a description of the proposed economic method of financing and administering the community to be created and maintained without likelihood of slums and the general deterioration which usually has accompanied private development. Under Part 3, a rough sketch was to be submitted showing the physical scheme of the proposed development.

The result of the competition has just been announced. Milo Hastings, New York City, and Robert Anderson Pope, also of New York City, were awarded two second prizes of $500 each.

In making this award of two second prizes, the jury was governed by the fact that, while the theses submitted, in both cases, offer a thorough analysis of the causes and cure for the housing problem as it now exists in the United States, the physical plans submitted did not fully provide for the application of the principles set forth in the theses. It was therefore decided to award two second prizes, since the jury was unwilling to make a discrimination between the theses of Mr. Hastings and Mr. Pope. Of the other twenty-nine submissions, those of merit contained analyses and solutions which largely coincided in principle with those to which the two second prizes were awarded, but failed in quality of presentation.

The two theses will be published in the Journal of the American Institute of Architects in the June and July numbers.

The competition involved a most arduous duty on the part of the jurors, each of whom was called upon to read and weigh carefully the thirty-one manuscripts and then to consider the drawings submitted as in support of the theses.

The jury selected by the A. I. A., to judge the contributions, consisted of the following men: Louis F. Post, Assistant Secretary of the Department of Labor; Herbert Quick, Farm Loan Board; Thomas Adams, Town Planning Advisor to the Commission of Conservation, Ottowa; Lawson Purdy, Charity Organization Society, New York City; Mrs. Edith Elmer Wood, Philadelphia; Frederick L. Ackerman, Architect, New York City; Milton B. Medary, Jr., Architect, Philadelphia; James Sullivan, American Federation of Labor, Washington; Thomas R. Kimball, President of the American Institute of Architects, Chairman, Omaha, Neb.

It will be remembered that the competition called for the submission of two theses, one on the social purpose which should govern any attempt to solve the housing problem, and one on the economic method of achieving that purpose.

The winning solutions will be offered to the people of the United States as contributions which attack the problem fundamentally, both as to cause and cure, and relate it to our whole social and industrial organization.

PROTECTION OF LABOR

Law Provides that Contractors shall Safeguard Help.

Indiana has made ample provision for the safety and protection of her laboring element employed in the construction industry. Every precaution has been taken to safeguard the workman, and laxity upon the part of the contractor, sub-contractor or owner is punishable by fine.

THREE-STORY BUILDING PROTECTIONS

It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation engaged in erecting or having erected any building or structure three stories or more in height, to begin the erection of any floor or story above the second story or floor from the ground or excavation until a flooring, staging or protection shall have been laid or placed on the second tier of beams or story from the excavation or ground level or to continue the erection or construction of such building more than two stories or tier of beams above such flooring or protection. Flooring, staging or protection shall at all times be laid and maintained to within the second story or floor below where workmen are engaged, and in no instance shall workmen be employed more than twenty-five feet above any flooring, staging or protection. Such floorings, staging and protections shall be so constructed and of such strength as will prevent the falling of materials or injury to workmen. All persons engaged in work or labor on buildings and other structures shall be protected from falling materials from above them by adequate floorings, stagings or other protections. It shall be the duty of owners, contractors and sub-contractors to see and require that these provisions are complied with.

STAGING OR SCAFFOLDING

That in the construction of any steel, iron, frame or other building having a clear story of twenty-five feet elevation, from the ground or excavation, a staging or scaffolding with closed plank flooring shall be placed under the whole extent of beams, girders, trusses or joints of such story upon which structural workers, carpenters, masons, or other persons are working, and not more than ten feet below the under side of such beams, girders, trusses or joists. In erecting, constructing, or repairing any wall, chimney, smoke stack, tower, cupola, bridge, framework, dome, arch, water pipe, stand pipe, tank, pole, staff, coal bunker, roof, dwelling or structure of any kind whatever thirty feet or more in height, where there are no well defined stories, sections, girders, joists, beams, or trusses, crossing or intersecting the same, where the employes are working, there shall be staging or scaffolding placed not more than ten feet below where the masons, carpenters, structural iron workers, or other employes are working on such building, walls, or structures aforesaid, such staging or scaffolding shall be placed and maintained in such manner as to prevent the falling through of such employes or materials, and such manner that workmen and others having a right to pass under or along or near such structure shall not be injured by the falling of any materials or any workman. Whenever workmen are employed and are working on any such structures, and are using or working on any staging or scaffolding, swing, hammock, or similar contrivance, it shall be the duty of the owner of such structure and all contractors, sub-contractors, and employers to maintain, at all times that workmen are employed thereon, railings or other devices to make such staging, scaffolding, hammocks, or other devices safe, and if men are working over and above to keep and maintain a second scaffolding or other device above the one upon which such workmen are employed, so as to prevent any workman from being injured by falling objects from above.

MATERIALS—SAFEGUARDS

It is hereby made the duty of all owners, contractors, sub-contractors, or persons whatsoever, engaged in the construction, erection, repair, alteration, removal, painting, handling, or selling of any building, bridge, or viaduct, to see and to require that all metal, wood, rope, chains, wires, elevators, explosives, machinery, appliances, ways, works, all contrivances, and everything whatsoever used therein, are carefully selected, inspected and tested, so as to detect and exclude defects and dangerous conditions, and that all scaffolding, staging, hoists, elevators, false work, or temporary or permanent structures, and all contrivances used, are amply, adequately and properly constructed, to bear all weight and adapted to and perform the services and meet the requirements for which they are designed or used with safety, and that they are properly and safely used, operated, handled and maintained, and that all staging and scaffolding, more than twenty feet from the ground, are made safe and secure from swaying, and provided with safeguards so as prevent the falling of workmen, and that all hoists, elevators, and cars are securely fenced, guarded, covered, or otherwise protected with safety arrangements and appliances to the fullest extent possible that the operation of such hoists, elevators, and other devices and contrivances shall permit, and that all shafts, openings, wells, stairways, floor openings, and similar places or conditions of danger, are inclosed and protected, and that all hoists, or mechanisms operated other than by hand power, are, when necessary for the safety of persons employed in or about the same, or for the safety of the general public, provided with the system of communication by means of signals or otherwise, so that at all times there may be prompt and efficient communications between the employes and other persons and the operator of the motive power, and that in the transmission and use of electricity of a dangerous voltage full and complete insulation shall be provided at all points where the public or any employes of the owner, contractor or sub-contractor, transmitting or using said electricity, are liable to come into contact with the wire or wires, and that dead wires are not mingled with live wires, nor to be strung upon the same support, and the arms or supports bearing live wires are especially designated and distinguished by a color or other designation which is instantly apparent, and that live electrical wires carrying a dangerous voltage are strung at such distance from the poles or supports as to permit repair men to freely engage in their work without danger of shock; and, generally it shall be the duty of all owners, contractors, sub-contractors, and all other persons having charge of, or responsible for, any work involving risk or danger to employes, or to the public, to use every device, care and precaution which it is practicable and possible to use for the protection and safety of life, limb and health, limited only by the necessity for preserving the reasonable efficiency of such structure, ways, work, plant, building, factory, elevator, cars, engines, machinery, or other devices or materials, without regard to additional cost of suitable materials or safety appliances, or safe conditions, or operations, the first concern being safety to life, limb and health.

PENALTY

Any person violating any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than ten dollars and not more than five hundred dollars for each violation thereof.

INVESTIGATED, ADVANCE CONSTRUCTION REPORTS

That is the material from which the news columns of this publication are made.

Representatives of the RECORDER are continually calling on architects, contractors, public officials and owners in search of live, detailed construction news which is assorted under its proper head and arranged each week in a most convenient manner so that he who is interested in the Indiana Construction Industry may know at glance just what is going on in this line of endeavor that would interest him most.

These news items furnish leads unobtainable through any other news medium in the State and are invaluable to the Contractor, Manufacturer and Material-supply Man who is desirous of the opportunity of getting in direct contact with state building operations.

Those seeking news of certain cities and localities will find same under local headings where more complete details are given than in the classified columns.

OPEN TO ALL

Indiana Architects Invited to Attend Architectural Convention.

Indiana architects as a whole are cordially invited to attend the convention of the Indiana Society of Architects to be held at Indianapolis, Saturday, June 28th. It is to be open to all those practicing architecture in the state whether members of the society or not.

There are to be open discussions on the various problems that arise to confront the architect that should prove of mutual benefit to all those of the profession. Put your perplexities in your grip and bring them to Indianapolis with you; maybe the other fellow can propose something that will prove a solution. Every architect has ideas, or should have, as to how the profession may be advanced; ideas as to practice, service and efficiency; bring your ideas with you, tell them to your fellow architects; they in turn may advance theories that will aid you. In this way there is bound to be suggestions that will work to the good of all.

Through this mutual interchange of ideas the architects of the State will be enabled to meet on a common ground and reach understandings that will inculcate harmony, shade petty selfish individuality that has in past years cropped out to stultify the influence of the profession and prevent it from attaining its deserved place as a power for good in the State.

There are certain phases of public affairs in which the architect is more qualified by education, training and experience to offer counsel than any other man, yet seldom is he called upon in his professional capacity by officials or the public for such counsel. Instead, building laws are proposed and passed, many large public improvements are conceived and put through to completion and large public building projects are put across without consideration for any definite program that the architect might advance to insure the best results to the public, a beautification of the community and a benefit to posterity.

There are various causes for this condition of affairs and one of the primary causes rests with the members of the architectural profession. Commercialism has prevented a concerted effort to educate the public as to the importance of good architecture and the advantage of planning to a definite end for permanence. In the scramble for work, and at times it is a scramble by a certain element in the architectural ranks, all thought of the dignity that should attach to the profession is cast aside and means are employed to secure work that would not be countenanced by any other profession.

Comparisons professionally are frequently made to attorneys and physicians when architects refer to architecture as a profession. When a person is ill and the services of a physician are retained other doctors don't rush to the family of the stricken one and try to take the case from the doctor that has been called in on the case. So it is with lawyers in legal matters. On the other hand there is a large percentage of architects who possess no compunction at attempting to undermine a fellow architect. Doctors do not enumerate the number of patients another doctor has lost, nor do lawyers elaborate on the cases where another lawyer has failed in his attempt to win a case for a client. But, the architect is the recipient of no such courtesy. Instead, his every misfortune is exposed to the prospective builder whether due to his own mistakes, the laxity of the contractor or the client who in an endeavor to economize undertook to attend to the construction himself. The architect planned the building, consequently, he is blamed for all the defects whether he is at fault or not.

Once a prospective builder, in talking with the writer, asked why it was that architects were so bitter in their denunciation of each other. It made a deep impression on him, but, he retained the architect of his choice despite the attempts of others to undermine and belittle the latter. It may be of interest to relate that the architect proved true to the confidence reposed in him and the owner was so satisfied with the result that he was the means of directing several other good projects into that architect's office.

At another time an architect showed the writer plans for some good work and said, "I'd like to give you reports on these projects but I can't at this stage for if I do I shall have about five architects "at my throat." His words were significant.

Such incidents can be eliminated by the architects themselves and this may be accomplished if the members of the profession will only get together. The building is there to be done and the architects would each get their share of it in time. If all architects could reach a definite understanding and work on a common basis the building commissions would of themselves be proportionately distributed among the architects for the different architects would impress the different owners accordingly.

Competition should be encouraged in that it tends to bring out the best ideas, but, public officials should be educated along the lines of regulated competitions and shown the necessity of having a neutral architect to act in an advisory capacity when an architect is to be selected. Architects, in order to receive consideration, should be compelled to make their plans meet the estimated cost. As it is now days many an architect is chosen who submits an elaborate plan that in execution will run far above the stipulated sum set aside for the building. The conscientious competitor who observed all the rules set forth and planned to keep the project within the limit of cost loses out in most cases because his work does not measure up to the elaborate plans submitted by some of the other competitors who were not so conscientious.

If the Indiana Society of Architects is backed up by the architects of the State it can remedy many of the existing evils and prove of benefit to all the architects. With a large membership made up from the ranks of the architects from all over the State it can become an authority and a power that will secure for the profession a long neglected recognition.

The Indiana architects should take their profession to heart, should get acquainted with each other and collectively work for the advancement of the profession which in time will prove beneficial to the individual architect.

For the benefit of those architects who are not members of the Society the following excerpts from the constitution of the organization are printed. If desirous of becoming a member of the Society fill out the application blank and mail to Merritt Harrison, 500 Board of Trade Bldg., Indianapolis.

OBJECT.

The object of this Society shall be to promote the business interests and efficiency of its members.

ACTIVE MEMBERSHIP.

Section 1. Any person actually engaged in the practice of architecture as an architect in the State of Indiana, shall be eligible to membership in the Society.

Sec. 2. Candidates for membership shall make written application, giving their educational qualifications, business and residence addresses, and be recommended by two members of the Society in addition to the membership committee, and every such application for membership shall be posted on the bulletin board for at least ten days before being acted upon by the board.

Sec. 5. Every person elected to regular membership in the Society shall within thirty days after he has been notified thereof by the Secretary, pay to the Secretary such proportion of the annual dues as shall correspond to the unexpired portion of the current half-year (no notice being taken of a fraction of a month) and shall not until then become a member of the Society nor be entitled to any of its privileges. In case of failure to so pay within the time specified his election shall become void.

Sec. 6. Any member whose indebtedness to the Society including the full amount of dues for the current half-year, is fully paid, may resign his membership by sending written notice of such resignation to the secretary; but no resignation shall be of effect if withdrawn within four weeks of its date. Any person ceasing to be a member of the Society through resignation or otherwise shall thereby forfeit all right and interest in the property of the Society.

Sec. 8. Any member who having forfeited his membership, should he be re-elected, shall pay the amount of his indebtedness to the Society at the time of forfeiture, in addition to membership fee. Members in arrears sixty days shall not be eligible for office, nor have the power to vote.

MEMBERSHIP FEES.

The initiation fee shall be $5.00. The fee shall accompany application for membership, and will be returned if application is not accepted.

ANNUAL DUES.

The annual dues for regular members shall be $5.00 per annum, payable in each case semi-annually in advance, on the first days of September and March of each year.

WASTING TIME

Those Waiting for Price Declines Inviting Former Disappointments.

The man who is delaying business enterprise in the hope that prices will come down is very much like the man who sits on the shore of the ocean waiting for the water to dry up so that he can run his motorcar to Europe on the bed of the sea.

The economists who are familiar with the financial history of the world are telling us that prices have reached a new level, from which they are not likely to recede. There may be exceptions due to peculiar conditions, but they will be exceptions.

Professor Fisher, of Yale, has reminded us that the general level of prices is dependent upon the volume and rapidity of the turnover of the circulating medium in relation to the business to be transacted. If the number of dollars circulated in cash and by bank checks doubles while the service to be rendered by this circulating medium remains constant the prices will come near to doubling.

This is what has happened time after time in the history of the world. There was a price revolution in the sixteenth century following the influx of gold from the Americas. Europe was flooded with new money and prices went up. People thought that the condition was temporary and we suppose many business men decided to postpone new enterprises until the prices came down again. But they did not come down. A new price level was reached.

To skip the intervening years with their successive expansions of the amount of money in circulation due to new discoveries of the precious metals or other causes we come to the close of the nineteenth century, when, within the memory of most adults, the gold fields of South Africa, Cripple Creek and Alaska began to turn out their yellow flood, and when the invention of the cyanide process of mining made it possible to recover gold from ores that hitherto had been discarded. Prices again rose, and what men paid $1 for ten years earlier cost them $1.50. The prices in the sixteenth century did not return to their former level and prices in the nineteenth century stayed up and have continued to rise in the twentieth century. The conditions brought about by the war have forced them up still higher.

Let us look a moment at the amount of money in circulation here at different periods. In 1900, for example, it was approximately $2,000,000,000, or just short of $27 per capita. This amount had risen by 1914 to $3,400,000,000, or $34.53 per capita. In 1918 it was more than $5,000,000,000, or more than $50 for every man, woman and child in the country. In eighteen years our circulating medium has more than doubled in actual amount and has nearly doubled in proportion to the population. Since the Federal Reserve banking system was established it has been increased by the addition of $2,600,000,000 in Federal Reserve bank notes. The use of trade acceptances as commercial paper, discountable at the banks, has expanded bank credit to an enormous extent and has had the effect of still further cheapening the value of a dollar.

An expert statistician could plot this expansion of currency on a diagram along with the increase in the index prices of typical commodities and thus show how they move together in the same direction.

"Normal" conditions—that is, conditions like those preceding the war—are not likely to return. We have left the old price level forever, unless all the teachings of economic history are wrong.

The individual business man knows that he cannot reduce his prices very much because the price of labor is high and the price of raw materials, save in exceptional instances, is also high. And the price of raw materials is high because the cost of producing them is dependent on the cost of labor. And labor is high because the increase in the number of dollars has decreased the purchasing power of each dollar.

No government interference with prices can permanently affect the prevailing conditions. Thus far it has produced confusion and dissatisfaction in all quarters. In the case of steel, which is an exception, the government has tried to keep the price at a level higher than the natural conditions warrant. The heavy demand for the commodity for war purposes has come to an end. Its export to Europe is likely to fall off, for the European nations are forced by dire necessity to produce at home all the steel possible. They have no money left from the war expenses to pay for foreign steel. Our steel men are likely to be confined to the home market for several years to come. The law of supply and demand will affect the price, and it is likely to reduce it somewhat, but hardly to the pre-war level.

All restrictions on the price of copper have been removed and it is now selling temporarily at about the price which it brought in 1914. But when the current of trade begins to flow across the ocean again the demand for copper in Europe will be followed by an increase in price which is likely to raise it to the prevailing level with other commodities.

The price of wheat will adjust itself to new conditions in a few months for the reason that the war has prevented the free distribution of the world crop. It will come down, but the day of $1 wheat is doubtless ended. If, as the economists assure us, the general price level is to remain about where it is, it is imperative that the farmers get more than $1 for their wheat. They cannot raise it for the pre-war prices.

The moral of all this is that, save in exceptional cases, it is a mistake to delay new enterprises in the hope of a return to the price level before the war. Wages are up and they are likely to stay up. Salaries will follow next and the cost of production will remain about where it now is. So it is the part of wisdom to face conditions as they are and to move forward, not rashly or with impetuosity, but with common prudence. Thus will the normal progress of business be resumed with safety, adjusting itself as it goes on to the great change that war and other things have wrought.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

That is the material from which the news columns of this publication are made.

Representatives of the RECORDER are continually calling on architects, contractors, public officials and owners in search of live, detailed construction news which is assorted under its proper head and arranged each week in a most convenient manner so that he who is interested in the Indiana Construction Industry may know at glance just what is going on in this line of endeavor that would interest him most.

These news items furnish leads unobtainable through any other news medium in the State and are invaluable to the Contractor, Manufacturer and Material-supply Man who is desirous of the opportunity of getting in direct contact with state building operations.

Those seeking news of certain cities and localities will find same under local headings where more complete details are given than in the classified columns.

A TIMELY MOVE

Construction Interests Contemplate Baring Building Facts to Public.

Realizing the complexities and uncertainties relative to conditions and prices that have invaded the building industry field to retard contemplated construction work, the Building Contractors Association of Indianapolis has started a move of wide and comprehensive scope in an effort to get at the bottom of things and clarify the atmosphere, that owner, architect, contractor and material man may know the real reason for existing conditions.

It is the intention of those behind the effort to call a meeting in the near future to which the various crafts, architects, contractors, material supplymen, bankers and railroad men, in fact, all those who have to do with the construction industry, are to be invited for a general discussion that will cover conditions relating to building.

The idea is to inaugurate a co-operative educational campaign by which the public may be given the plain facts as they relate to building costs. Wages, freight rates, building loan conditions and production costs are to be threshed out and the public is to be let in on the real situation.

People have been exhorted to "Build Now" only to find, when they attempted it, that costs far exceeded their expectations. Prices seemed excessive and discouraged many prospective builders who could not understand the reason for them. Fact of the matter, the reasons advanced were vague, and about all the builder who contemplated construction could learn was that prices were up to stay with no hope for an early reduction. Many came to believe the construction interests had seized upon the slogan as a means to boost prices.

If such suspicions are to be dispelled it will require a concentrated effort of constructive thinking and action on the part of contractors, architects and material supply men to educate the people to the true situation and the whys and wherefores of such.

It is to educate the public along this line that the Building Contractors Association has inaugurated the move to call a meeting of the building interests. Each craft is to set forth the conditions as they exist within its sphere that the other crafts may collectively know why the costs are high. Lumber, steel, brick, cement and other material supply-men are to explain their production costs. Railroad men will be asked to dilate on freight rates; financial men will be asked to review the building loan situation; contractors will explain their working conditions, and labor men will cover the wage situation. Architects will contribute to the general knowledge by showing how efficient service may obtain in plans the most from an economical standpoint.

When all is said and done, those of the construction interests will have reached a mutual understanding as to why prices have reached the present level.

Then it is that "all cards will be laid on the table" that the public may know and see why things are as they are respecting elements that have entered to force up building costs and will continue to hold the figures at their present standard.

The architect, contractor, material supply-man and banker will have a clear conception of each phase of the building situation and can talk intelligently to the prospective builder to encourage rather than discourage him.

Then too, a mutual understanding between the allied building interests in these days of high construction costs will tend to a getting together with a view to economizing, where possible, and reducing final costs.

All this should stimulate building, for, the composite interest of those entering into a construction deal with an owner will inspire confidence and the latter, knowing the conditions as they exist, will not feel that he is being held up.

The Building Contractors Association believes that in serving the public it can best serve the construction interests. The contractor can advocate good permanent construction; the architect can encourage modest homes, well designed; the material supply-man can educate along the lines of lasting materials, and the banker can inspire a new spirit of thrift among the citizens of his community by teaching them the possibilities of obtaining financial assistance in the erection of homes.

CONSTRUCTION LAW

Pertaining to Theaters Adequately Provides for Safety.

While there has been little legislative action taken in Indiana with regard to the construction of public buildings that would safeguard the occupants of structures, there is one law that does cover this field, and that pertains to theater construction. This law breathes safety from beginning to end, and provides penalties for the owner, architect or contractor who shall ignore the provisions set forth to insure the protection of the public.

The law provides that no building shall be altered or erected to be used as a theater, opera house or other building intended for theatrical or operatic purposes, lectures or concerts, or other public entertainments of any kind unless it complies with the requirements set forth below. Plans and specifications setting forth the construction and including a system or method of ventilation must be filed with the chief inspector of the State Department of Inspection and passed upon by him before it is legal to proceed with the building in contemplation.

Every theater, opera house, or other building accommodating three hundred persons shall consist of two exits. When accommodating five hundred persons, at least three exits shall be provided. Doorways of exit or entrance for the use of the public shall not be less than five feet in width, and for every individual one hundred persons, or portion thereof, to be accommodated in excess of five hundred, an aggregate of twenty inches additional exit width must be allowed. (These doorways of exit and of entrance may be in the front all together, or in case of a theater or opera house having also an exit and an entrance directly to and from another street, through a way or passage covered or otherwise, the width of one-third of that of the widest part of the auditorium or assembly hall, some of the said doorways may be made therein, to such an extent as said entrance or passage will accommodate the same.) All doors of exits or entrances shall open outwardly, and be hung to swing in such a manner as not to become an obstruction in a passage or corridor, and no such doors shall be locked during any entertainment or when the building is open to the public. Distinct and separate places of exit and entrance shall be provided for each gallery above the first. A common place of exit and entrance may serve for the first floor of the auditorium and first gallery, provided its capacity be equal to the aggregate capacity of the outlets from the main floor and said gallery. No passage leading to any stairway, communicating with any entrance or exit, shall be less than five feet in width in any part thereof.

STAIRWAYS

Stairways serving for the exit of the audience shall be one foot in width for each one hundred persons, and in no case shall the width of such stairways be less than four feet. In no case shall the risers of any stairs exceed seven and one-half inches in height, nor shall the treads, exclusive of the nosings, be less than ten and one-half inches wide. When stairs return directly on themselves, a landing of the full width of both flights, without any steps shall be provided. Stairs turning at an angle shall have a proper landing, without winders introduced at said turn. In stairs when two side flights connect with one main flight no winders shall be introduced, and the width of the main flight shall be at least equal to the aggregate width of said flights. All inclosed staircases shall have on both sides strong hand rails firmly secured in the wall about three inches therefrom, and about three feet above the stairs, but said hand rails need not run on level platform and landings where the same is more in length than the width of the stairs. All staircases six feet and over in width shall be provided with a center hand rail of hardwood or metal not less than two inches in diameter, placed at a height of about three feet above the center of the treads, and supported on wrought iron or brass standards of sufficient strength, placed not farther than four feet apart and securely bolted to the treads or risers of stairs, or both, and at the head of each flight of stairs, on each landing, the post or standard shall be at least six feet in height to which the rail shall be secured.

STAGE EXITS—AISLES—SEATS

In all theaters, opera houses, or places of public amusement, where stage scenery or apparatus is used, there shall be provided two direct exterior outlets from the stage. Where dressing rooms are under stage, more than one way of escape shall be provided for each room. All seats in the auditorium, except those contained in the boxes, shall be firmly secured to the floor and no seat in the auditorium shall have more than six seats between it and aisle on either side. All aisles on the respective floors in the auditorium, having seats on both sides of the same, shall not be less than three feet wide where they begin and shall be increased in width towards the exits in the ratio of one and one-half inch to five running feet. Aisles having seats on one side only shall be not less than two feet wide at their beginning and increase in width the same as aisles having seats on both sides, but the provisions of this act shall not apply to any building now in use for theatrical or operatic purposes, but is intended to include all buildings to be hereafter erected or remodeled for theatrical or operatic purposes.

STAND PIPES—NOZZLES—WATER PIPES, ETC.

In every building used for theatrical, operatic or other purposes, where stage scenery or apparatus is used, stand pipes of at least two inches in diameter shall be provided, with hose attachments of not less than one and one-half inches in diameter or turret nozzles one on each side of the stage, and each level, and at least one in the property room, and one in the carpenter shop, if the same be contiguous to the building. All such stand pipes shall be kept clear from obstructions. Said stand pipes shall be separate and distinct, receiving their supply of water from the city mains, and also a siamese connection on main line, and shall be fitted with the regulation couplings of the fire department, and shall be kept constantly filled with water ready for immediate use at all times during a performance in said building or buildings. Turret nozzles, or a proper and sufficient quantity of at least one and one-half inch hose, with nozzles attached thereto, fitted with the regulation couplings of the fire department, and with hose spanners at each outlet, shall always be kept attached to each hose attachment. There shall also be provided a line of water pipe, of suitable size, across the proscenium arch, to which shall be attached devices that will operate so as to make a water curtain in front or rear of the regular drop curtain. A controlling valve to turn on the water for this water curtain shall be placed on the stage at each side of the proscenium arch.

EXIT SIGNS

In every building used for theatrical, operatic or other purposes, where stage scenery or apparatus is used, the word "exit" shall be painted in plain English letters, not less than eight inches in length, over each door or place of egress. Every exit shall have over the same a red light. All lights over exits in the halls, corridors, lobby or any other part of said buildings, used by the audience, except the auditorium, must be independent and controlled by a separate circuit. The switch or shut-off shall be located in the box office or manager's office and controlled only in that particular place, which lights shall remain lighted until the entire audience has left the theater.

GRADIENTS—FIRE-PROOF PAINT

Gradients or inclined planes shall be employed instead of steps, where the rise is not more than one foot in ten. All woodwork, including the under side of all floor boards, and all scenery used on or about the stage, shall be coated with fire-proof paint. The fire-resisting qualities shall be tested and approved by the Department of Inspection.

STAGE FLUES OR DUCTS

There shall be over the stage of every building, where stage scenery or apparatus is used, accommodating more than five hundred people, flues or ducts extending above the highest roof which forms a part of such building, which flues and ducts shall have an area of at least one-tenth of the total area of such stage. The dampers for opening and closing such ducts shall be constructed so as to open instantly on the loosening, cutting or burning of a hempen cord, which shall be arranged to hold said dampers closed, or some other equally simple, approved device for opening them may be provided. These dampers shall be made of sheet metal and the ducts of incombustible material, and shall be properly insulated as regards transmission of heat to adjacent combustible substances.

CONSTRUCTION—ARCHITECT—PENALTIES

Any person erecting or constructing a building, or an architect or other person who shall draw plans or specifications or superintend the erection or construction of a building, in violation of the provisions of this act, shall be punished by a fine of not less than fifty dollars ($50.00) nor more than one thousand dollars ($1,000). And if any building is constructed in violation of this act, each day that such building remains so constructed in violation thereof shall constitute a separate and distinct offense.

ATTRACTIVE FEATURES

Planned to Entertain Architects at the State Convention.

No effort has been spared by the officers of the Indiana Society of Architects to make the approaching architectural convention at Indianapolis, June twenty-eighth, a most entertaining, educational and inspirational affair. It is to be open to all practicing architects of the State, and it is hoped that those of the architectural profession will avail themselves of the opportunity to get together for a general discussion as to the best means for increasing the efficiency of architectural practice and the advancement of the profession throughout the State.

Since the American Institute of Architects has encouraged the formation of state architects' societies and has proposed that such organizations work in conjunction with the recently appointed Post War Committee of the Institute to reach a solution for the new conditions that have sprung up as a result of the war, an effort is being made to have an architect of national reputation and prominent in Institute circles visit Indianapolis to address the Society along those lines.

The architect in question took an active part in the Post War discussions at the annual convention of the Institute at Nashville, Tenn., recently and is ably qualified to impart valuable data and information to the Indiana architects that should prove beneficial to all and aid greatly in arranging future action to advance the architectural practice locally.

There will be informal discussions covering the various angles of the professional practice as encountered in Indiana and each architect should come prepared to enter heartily into this feature of the day's activities.

Arrangements have been made for the registration of visiting architects at the Columbia Club after which there will be a luncheon at the club at 1:30 P. M. Following the luncheon, the convention will be called to order by President A. F. Wicks of Gary for a business session. There will be reports by the various committees and the annual election of officers.

Addresses are to be made covering: Filing Systems; Cost Systems; Contracts between Architect and Owner; Issuance of a Hand Book of Architectural Data by the Indiana Society of Architects; State Building Code.

Later in the afternoon the convention will adjourn to the Indianapolis Athletic and Canoe Club where a recreational feature has been planned. Situated artistically as it is in a soothing environment on the banks of White River with tennis courts handy, a golf course just across the river, and the stream itself affording an opportunity for swimming, the various artistic and athletic tastes of the architects can be appeased.

At six P. M. a chicken dinner will be served. The dinner completed, unfinished business will be resumed, to be followed by the principal address of the day at which time the assembled architects will be enlightened as to the aim of the American Institute of Architects in the establishment of a Post War Committee and the plan of operation in which state societies largely figure.

AROUND THE STATE

Archt. Merritt Harrison, 500 Board of Trade bldg., Indianapolis, has increased his organization by the addition of Engineer Kenneth Coffin, graduate of Purdue University, and Miss Constance Early, interior decorator, graduate of Chicago Art Institute.

The architectural firm of Herbert L. Bass & Co., 801 Hume-Mansur bldg., Indianapolis, has reorganized under the name of Bass-Knowlton & Graham. Mr. Herbert Bass will have charge of the business affairs of the firm while Mr. Lynn O. Knowlton will have charge of the structural engineering and Mr. Donald Graham will look after the designing.

INVESTIGATED, ADVANCE CONSTRUCTION REPORTS

That is the material from which the news columns of this publication are made.

Representatives of the RECORDER are continually calling on architects, contractors, public officials and owners in search of live, detailed construction news which is assorted under its proper head and arranged each week in a most convenient manner so that he who is interested in the Indiana Construction Industry may know at glance just what is going on in this line of endeavor that would interest him most.

These news items furnish leads unobtainable through any other news medium in the State and are invaluable to the Contractor, Manufacturer and Material-supply Man who is desirous of the opportunity of getting in direct contact with state building operations.

Those seeking news of certain cities and localities will find same under local headings where more complete details are given than in the classified columns.

NO TIME NOW

To Sound Pessimistic Note on the Building Outlook.

There is an element prevalent in Indiana construction circles that should be eliminated, and that speedily. It is the inclination of some, architects, contractors and material men, to depreciate surface appearances and even underlying indications as to the future of building. They carp about conditions not being right; high prices; a shortage of labor; and the slowness of people to take a hold of building ventures, in fact, they openly express a general tone of pessimism and seem to delight in throwing cold water on the situation.

It is true that building operations were slow to gain impetus this spring for conditions were unfavorable due to the chaotic effect produced by several years of war and then the uncertainty following the signing of the armistice. However, there has been a tendency toward a rearighting of things and, everything considered, construction operations are assuming a fair degree of activity.

Public work was the first to show any strength as officials, encouraged by the government, set about to build. Several substantial court house projects have been launched, the contract for one having been awarded while schemes for others promise maturity the coming fall. While not coming under the head of building construction, still, there are public improvements such as concrete, brick and other hard surfaced roads, bridges and sewers, that mean the expenditure of large sums of money, the requirement of certain lines of materials, the employment of labor and will eventually stimulate confidence and be contributory to building operations later on.

Township and city officials have, in many ininstances, lent their effort to the forward movement to encourage building by taking up and proposing the erection of city buildings, school houses and memorial edifices. In some cases the issuance fo bonds to care for such projects would have been a burden to the communities and the State Tax Board stepped in to investigate, but, this has not greatly interfered where construction was absolutely necessary. Nevertheless, the action of the Tax Board in stopping some of the building projects is cited by the pessimists to show that the future is dark.

Industrial construction assumed fair proportions in the past two months in Indiana, indicating a confidence of the manufacturers in the immediate future and an inclination on their part to prepare for the prospective increase of business. In addition to this type of work already started there is a prospect for the construction of many more factories, mills, warehouses and storage houses before winter sets in.

Building permits from the principal cities of Indiana show considerable activity in the smaller field of construction endeavor; houses, small flats, stores and a general line of remodeling, alterations and additions. Much of this work does not affect the architect or large contractor but it does mean business, the consumption of building material and a desire on the part of the people to proceed with work that was delayed by the war and government restrictions relative to building.

Speculative building has not developed to any great degree so far but a few good projects have appeared and been started. It is only a matter of time until the speculative builder will realize that there is a firm to strong tone ruling on prices in the material market and that it only means wasted time to delay construction in the hope for a break and decline.

There is and has been for sometime a forward movement in the stock market and new issues of preferred stock are constantly being taken up in the East before they have a chance to reach the open market. All of which points to good business for months to come with every prospect that building operations should increase right along.

Personal investigation among the architects' offices throughout Indiana shows activity, an activity backed up by a strong degree of confidence; contracts on good work are being awarded steadily, in some instances, slight revisions being made to meet increased costs. There seems to be a scarcity of labor and contractors are continually calling for men of the various building crafts.

If one sits around, disregards the indications, mopes because he loses out on a contract, it is easily understandable why he is pessimistic. Everyone in the building game should be alive to the situation, study the elements that seek to retard and set about to overcome them. There should be no pulling back, instead, all should drive, drive hard and drive clear to the wire to win.

HOW TO KILL A CLUB

1. Don't come.
2. If you do come, come late.
3. If too wet or too dry, too hot or too cold, don't think of coming.
4. Kick if you are never appointed on a committee, and, if you are appointed, never attend a committee meeting.
5. Don't have anything to say when you are called upon.
6. If you do attend a meeting, find fault with the proceedings and work done by other members.
7. Hold back your dues, or don't pay them at all.
8. Never bring a friend who you think might join the association.
9. Don't do anything more than you can possibly help to further the association's interests; then, when a few take off their coats and do things, howl that the association is run by a clique.

TO PREVENT STRIKES

Plan Agitated for Handling of Building Jurisdictional Disputes.

In an effort to adjust in a conciliatory and cooperative spirit, with equity and justice for all concerned, a plan has been advanced by the U. S. Department of Labor for the creation of a National Board of Jurisdictional Awards in the building industry. Its function would be to settle by arbitration disputes over work that is claimed by more than one building craft.

The possibilities of the scheme have appealed strongly to those interested in the construction industry and action has been started for the creation of such a board. Endorsement has been given to the proposition by the American Institute of Architects, the Associated General Contractors of America, the National Association of Builders Exchanges and the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor.

The plan for the creation of the National Board of Jurisdictional Awards in the Building Industry is set forth below and is submitted to all interested organizations for adoption.

As a means of stabilizing the building industry, to encourage the resumption of building operations, to conserve needful energy, to eliminate waste through the reduction or abolition of jurisdictional strife, and to create complete harmony among the several units entering into building construction, this plan is recommended for approval and adoption.

The Board shall have the power to investigate all disputes and to make awards in accordance with its findings, as hereafter provided.

All complaints must be submitted to the Board in writing by the party or parties in interest, through the officials of an organization which is a party to this agreement, stating clearly the exact nature of the work in contention, and they shall have the right to submit, through such persons as they may select, all evidence or arguments they may consider pertinent, in which case a hearing shall be given at the next meeting and an award shall be made after the hearing of the evidence.

When a dispute arises the employer to whom the work has been given shall proceed with such workmen as in his judgment he may see fit to employ pending a decision by the Board; but the right of any contestant to the dispute shall not be prejudiced in its claim for a final award.

Each signatory to this agreement hereby agrees that the membership of that organization shall not take part in sympathetic strikes in any case of jurisdictional dispute.

Labor organizations signatory to this agreement shall secure the enforcement and compliance of their organizations with the provisions of this agreement and the awards of the Board.

Local organizations refusing compliance with the provisions of this agreement and the awards of this Board shall be suspended from their International organization and the International organization shall proceed at once to man the job and the Employer shall co-operate with the International organization in so doing.

Any architect, engineer or employer represented on this Board through an organization signatory to this agreement shall be suspended from his organization or organizations upon failure to comply with the provisions of this agreement and the awards of this Board.

The Board shall consist of eight members, three to be selected by the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, they to be International Officials, and one each by the American Institute of Architects, the Engineering Council, the Associated General Contractors of America, the National Association of Builders' Exchanges and the National Building Trades Employers' Association.

Each member if unable to serve shall select a substitute in his stead.

Not more than one member shall be elected by the Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L. from the same trade.

The duties of the Board shall be to hear claims for jurisdiction over work performed by Building Trades; and to determine by which trade the work in contention shall be performed and to make an award in conformity with the facts submitted by the contendents. At least a two-thirds majority of the voting members of the full Board shall be required to render an award in all cases.

The Board may appoint committees composed of its members to investigate any case brought to its attention. The report of such a committee shall be made to the Board within thirty days from date of appointment.

Should the Board fail to make an award an umpire may be agreed upon whose findings shall be final. Should the Board, by a two-thirds majority, be unable to agree upon an umpire, the Secretary of the U. S. Department of Labor shall be called upon to name the umpire.

Awards by the Board may be reopened and reheard upon the submission of new evidence at the request of any of the parties in interest, providing that at least six members of the Board vote favorably on allowing a rehearing. Pending a rehearing, the award made shall remain in force and effect.

No member representing the Building Trades Department shall vote on an award in a dispute in which his own craft is involved, nor shall any member employing one trade exclusively vote on any award in which that trade is a party at interest.

The Board shall certify its awards to the officials of each of the organizations, parties hereto.

It shall be the duty of the officials, upon receiving such information, to instruct its members to carry out the decisions of the Board and to use them as a guide in the conduct of their work.

The decisions shall govern the architects and engineers in writing specifications and the contractors in awarding contracts.

The term of office of members of the Board shall be two years. Serving members shall be eligible for re-election.

Resignations and vacancies on the Board shall be filled by the organizations from which they were elected.

Compensation and expenses of members shall be determined by the organizations they represent. All routine expenses of the Board shall be divided pro rata between the organizations selecting members of the Board.

The headquarters of the Board shall be in Washington, D. C. Meetings may be held elsewhere at the option of the Board.

The Board shall meet on the first Mondays in August, November, February and May, or upon the call of the Chair.

Rules and regulations to cover necessary parliamentary procedure may be adopted at any regular session of the Board, by a majority vote.

Amendments or additions to this plan may be submitted at any time to the organizations parties to the plan, for adoption, by a majority to decide the questions submitted.

The parties hereto bind themselves individually and severally to abide by the decision of the Board as herein created.

In order to avert jurisdictional strife it is the recommendation of the Board that new materials, specialties and methods of application shall be passed upon by the Board before being specified or used, provided six members of the Board shall have agreed that the subject has not been previously covered.

HEARTY ACCORD

Extended Proposition for Conference to Analyze Building Situation.

Business interests having to do with the construction industry have been quick to appreciate the advisability of the move proposed by the Indianapolis Building Contractors Association for the calling together of the building fraternity for a general conconference to analyze conditions as they prevail in the construction field and to set forth clearly to the public the reason for the present price level.

It seems to be universally agreed that there is a prevalent misunderstanding, or, a general lack of knowledge on the part of the public regarding a construction operation and the cause for the costs involved. The public ignores the many and varied elements entailed in production and erection.

To get at the true facts and lay them before the public is the object of the proposed conference so that the prospective builder can satisfy himself that there is justification for current costs.

Following the signing of the armistice many believed there would be a lowering of prices. However, this was purely a surmise for, when conditions were studied, there was no evidence to support the belief. Every indication pointed to the fact that a new price level had been reached and that the pre-war conditions were a thing of the past. History demonstrates that in former years people hoped in vain for lower prices following great crises, only to readjust themselves to the new condition of affairs after much valuable time had been wasted by waiting.

Those of the Indianapolis Contractors Association have been quick to realize that if the public interest is to be served there must be a serious effort made to study and examine facts regarding prices that the public may be enlightened along this line and become convinced of the fairness of present conditions.

The above view of the matter has been taken readily by financial men, labor authorities, public officials, business men, architects and those vitally interested in the construction industry. If there is to be an expansion of business there must be construction and the proposed conference points the way to a revival of the building industry. It will remove the misgivings, suspicious and misconceptions now harbored by the prospective builder.

There is no line of business that has not experienced increased overhead costs; there is no line in which prices have not advanced. Yet, when a man contemplates building, his first objection, and a most serious one to the advancement of the project, arises at the evident expenditure of money that will be required. He never takes into consideration the increased production costs of materials, advanced freight rates that figure in the securing of materials, the increase of labor's wages, etc. These figures are not reckoned with, and, a howl goes up.

These are the things that are to be analyzed and the facts set forth for the perusal and study of the public that they may become fully acquainted with conditions as they really are.

An attempt is to be made to reach a basis for financing contemplated projects that will encourage building activity. It will then be up to the architect, not merely to draw plans but to study his problem and so design to please the client and, at the same time, scheme to cut down on elaboration in order to hold construction costs to a minimum. Material men can co-operate by suggesting the best material obtainable at a reasonable price; the contractor can aid in the good work by economizing where possible and still secure the greatest efficiency from his organization.

This move on the part of the construction interests and the hearty co-operative spirit with which it has been accepted by the Indianapolis financial men, business men, labor authorities and public officials augurs well for the future of Indiana construction for the influence of a general understanding on the part of the public should extend throughout the state and mean much to a revival of the building industry.

INVESTIGATED, ADVANCE CONSTRUCTION REPORTS

That is the material from which the news columns of this publication are made.

Representatives of the RECORDER are continually calling on architects, contractors, public officials and owners in search of live, detailed construction news which is assorted under its proper head and arranged each week in a most convenient manner so that he who is interested in the Indiana Construction Industry may know at glance just what is going on in this line of endeavor that would interest him most.

These news items furnish leads unobtainable through any other news medium in the State and are invaluable to the Contractor, Manufacturer and Material-supply Man who is desirous of the opportunity of getting in direct contact with state building operations.

Those seeking news of certain cities and localities will find same under local headings where more complete details are given than in the classified columns.

PROCEEDINGS

Full Report of Convention of the Indiana Society of Architects.

The annual convention of the Indiana Society of Architects held at Indianapolis, June 28, was a most interesting gathering. The business session during the afternoon was a lively one at which much was accomplished. It was conducted in splendid fashion by President A. F. Wickes who kept things moving in a spirited way being ably assisted by the delegates who showed keen interest in the matters at hand. It was the most successful meeting ever held by the state architects.

Preliminary to the calling of the convention to order the local and visiting architects assembled at the Columbia Club where luncheon was served in the private dining room.

Those present were: Dwight L. Perkins, F. A. I. A., Chicago, Ill.; A. F. Wickes, president, Gary, Ind.; Merritt Harrison, Secretary, Indianapolis; Chas. E. Scott, Terre Haute, Ind.; O. C. Brubaker, Mishawaka, Ind.; E. Hill Turnock, Elkhart, Ind.; H. M. Griffin, Connersville, Ind.; A. A. Honeywell, Kokomo, Ind.; Oscar Hoffman, Decatur, Ind.; Wm. Richter, Bedford, Ind.; Stephen C. Dark, Anton Scherrer, Herman Scherrer, Thos. A. Winterrowd, Chas. Brossman, W. H. Garns, Layton Allen, Donald Graham, Geo. F. Bass, Herbert Bass, Herbert Foltz, F. A. I. A., Robert Frost Daggett, Daniel F. Luten, H. H. Friedley, State Fire Marshal, M. R. Wainwright, J. H. Owens, F. F. Haskell, all of Indianapolis, Ind.

PRESIDENT WICKES' ADDRESS.

Following the luncheon President Wickes called the meeting together and spoke as follows:

"This is a business meeting of the Indiana Society of Architects. We propose to finish all the business this afternoon, then have a little play-time, and hold another meeting this evening, at which time we will have some speeches and other important matters up before the Society.

This is the first meeting that we have held in which we can welcome back those of our members who have been in the Service. We want them to know that we are glad they are back on the job in Indiana, and in the Indiana Society of Architects. I do not know whether we ever have had a Service Flag, but if we did, I do not think there has been a single gold star thereon. The Society, founded in 1917, hadn't been organized long enough to have an effective War Service Committee as the Illinois Society has done, however, I think we can learn much from our members who have been in the Service and our Society will benefit by the spirit they bring back to us. At least I hope so. I am sure this is particularly true of the Illinois Society, as Mr. Perkins could tell us, who is a member of that body. Bolshevism or socialism can never find any place in America—the principle of Democracy prohibits that. There is never going to be mob rule while America has such great leaders.

A good many hundred years ago a new era was promised to a group of men, and those men disputed among themselves, one thought he would certainly be appointed to a position of honor, and another man expected to be appointed to this place himself, so they contended among themselves who should hold the major position. In that new era of affairs they were called to a meeting. In that country they wore sandals. After walking in the country as they did in those times, it was customary that the dust should be washed off the feet, and it was a regular custom in the home for the servants to wash the feet. In this meeting they had no servant and each man had in his mind that he was to be considered someone of distinction and it was a question among them who should take the basin and wash the others feet. One who was their Teacher saw the difficulty among His followers, and quietly took the basin and towel and washed their feet. It was a silent rebuke, and while some protested, they were finally induced to permit it to go on.

That Man who did this, stood for greater service. We are trying to learn right now the lesson of service to humanity. Right here in Indiana, what is the real service we can do for our community? We, as professional men, what shall we do, what are the little things of life, architects can do to contribute to the comfort and happiness of mankind?

Just a thought about appreciation. I never heard of Theodore Roosevelt talking about appreciation. He spoke with authority, acted with authority, and with no question about appreciation. Because we are self-centered, because we talk about appreciation, we do a little thing and then admire it. A man ought never stop to admire his own work. Leave that out and let hard work primarily be our design and in the spirit of the Master, practice architecture in the thought of service. I refer to these things not because they are related to the work of an architect, but because they are related to life and, we are all living.

Gentlemen, let us enter into the new year's work with new zeal and greater determination to be of service to all mankind. It seems sometimes the work of an architect is all with the rich, but perhaps we can determine how to be of more service to the poor and those of medium circumstances. Our work toward fire prevention and in any way to make homes safer and more livable, may help along this line. Let us define what our duties shall be and then we shall go out and discharge those duties." (Applause.)

President Wickes: "Gentlemen, we will now hear the reading of the minutes of the previous meetings by the secretary."

THE SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Mr. Harrison:

"Minutes of the Regular Meeting of the Indiana Society of Architects held at the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, March 23, 1919.

The regular meeting of the Indiana Society of Architects was held at the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, Indianapolis, Ind., March 23, 1919. The following members were present:

Mr. Layton Allen, Mr. A. F. Wickes, Mr. Herbert Foltz, Mr. Wm. McLucas, Mr. George Bass, Mr. C. E. Scott, Mr. Kurt Vonnegut, Mr. Thos. Winterrowd, Mr. Merritt Harrison, Secretary.

Mr. H. H. Friedley, State Fire Marshal, and Mr. Bradley, Assistant Fire Marshal, were present in the afternoon and gave us a talk on Building Code for the State of Indiana. Mr. Friedly, at that time, brought up for discussion House Bill No. 362 (The State Building Code). He spoke of how much the interest of the Architect would help to obtain for the State of Indiana, a building code. The law provides for a good personnel of the work and consists namely of four provisions:

Prevention of Fires
Safe Storage
Installation of Signals
Suppression of Arson.

Following is a general summary of the law: The State Fire Marshall will act upon complaints and can order changes made in fire escapes, and other safety devices necessary to make them absolutely safe. Within five days after the complaint is filed with the local board, an appeal can be taken to the State Fire Marshall and within ten days, appealed to the Circuit Court for final decision.

The law is careful of individual rights and the general agreements are that the law will be very good. There is need for the Architects to work with them in this work, as they are anxious to lessen the fire hazard in the state.

By the proper methods much of the fire hazard of today can be eliminated. Reports recently taken showed that a tax of $2.50 was charged to each child born because of the numerous fires. Statements also showed that 66 2/3% of the Fire tax was preventable and that as much as $250,000,000 went up in smoke each year in the state of Indiana.

What can the Architect do to help? It has been proved that 50% of the fires originate from two causes: the shingle roof and the defective flue. This as was pointed out, can in course of time be corrected by the Architect. By careful preparation of plans and the proper superintendence on the job, the defective flue or unlined flue can be eliminated, and by using asbestos, tile or other inflamable roofiing materials for roofs of city houses, the danger from sparks will also be eliminated.

It is therefore up to the Architects to lead in this fight which may be a hard one, against the shingle roof and thereby reduce the fire hazards in the state of Indiana.

Mr. Bradley then followed with an interesting talk on the "Origin of Fires in the Country Side."

Mr. H. O. Garman, representative of the Engineers, attended this meeting in the interest of the Architects License Law.

Mr. Thos. A. Wynne also gave an interesting talk on "Advertising for the Architect." He brought out several important features during the course of his talk, namely that the Architect should let the people know who he is and what he is ready to do for them. There seems to be a lazy, shiftless feeling among some of the people of the average American city, of being satisfied with the lower and less beautiful things in life. They don't seem to think of the permanence, location, etc., when building a home, but just as a place to eat and sleep.

People need to be educated to the wonders of a home and what the Architect can do for them in creating a real home site. Who designed that house, they ask, The Contractor? No, the brains of the Architect, who was educated and trained in designing and selecting building materials, bringing them together to create for them these beautiful home sites.

By the proper advertising, the Architects can help to educate the people to better standards of living so that they will no longer think the Architect unnecessary, but essential to the joyful feeling of possessing a real home.

Directors Meeting held January 11, 1919.

Mr. C. E. Scott, Mr. Herbert Foltz, Mr. George Bass, Mr. A. F. Wickes, Mr. Wilbur Shook, Mr. Merritt Harrison.

A motion was made by Scott and seconded by Shook that a special committee be appointed to represent the Indiana Society of Architects at the Scientech Club. Following are the men appointed to this committee:

Mr. Herbert Bass, Chairman, Mr. Herbert Foltz, Mr. Wilbur Shook, Mr. Merritt Harrison.

A motion was made by Mr. Foltz and seconded by Mr. Scott, that we adopt the proposed license law, and refer back to the Engineers and recommend to the legislature that bill be passed.

It was moved by Mr. Foltz and seconded by Mr. Harrison that the President be a committee of one with power to act, in favor of co-operation with the State Societies of Illinois, Michigan and Iowa.

The following Special Legislative Committee was given power to act:

Mr. Herbert Foltz, Chairman, Mr. Herbert Bass, Mr. Wilbur Shook, Mr. Merritt Harrison."

CORRESPONDENCE.

A letter was read by the secretary from an advertising man who gave his plans for getting out a handbook for the Indiana Society of Architects.

ADOPTION OF OFFICIAL PAPER.

President Wickes:

"Gentlemen, there is a matter to come before the Society of considerable importance, viz: The Indiana Construction Recorder, a good live publication, has tentatively been adopted as our Official Organ. It means much to the Society to have such a paper as this as their Official Organ, and I would like to have you ratify the tentative action taken to make it such.

Motion was regularly made and seconded and unanimously carried making the Indiana Construction Recorder the Official Organ of the Indiana Society of Architects."

The President announced that it was then 3:40 and that he would like to get through with the business session by 4:00 o'clock if possible so that the members would have two hours to play, swim, dance or whatever they chose to do before the evening meeting. He then called for Committee Reports.

THE TREASURER'S REPORT.

Treasurer, Geo. F. Bass, made report to cover the period since the organization of the Society in 1917, viz:

1917—Enrolled, 62.

Received payment of dues from 47.

1918-19—Received payment of dues from 26.

Total receipts from all sources	$385.00
Paid out on O. K. of Secretary	296.05
Balance in bank	$ 88.95

The Treasurer asked if it was desired to have all the items read for which money had been paid out, but the President stated this was not necessary, and report was approved as read. The President reminded those, if any were present who were delinquent, that the dues should be paid up.

MEMBERSHIP COMMITTEE.

Mr. Scott: "I am not in position to make any report, as I did not bring any data, and we did nothing last year on account of the war, except I believe we passed on one or two names."

LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE.

Mr. Weatherhogg, Chairman of this committee, was not present.

SPECIAL REPORT—LAST LICENSE LAW.

Mr. Herbert Bass:

"We worked hard and got nothing. We had quite a little conversation and argument as to what it should be and how it should be compiled, also had a conference with the Engineers, and the question was brought up as to the Engineers joining with us, but there seemed to be some dissatisfaction among some of the members as to whether they should be combined with the Architects. It might be a good idea to think this point over, and other phases of the question also, so that we may be sure of more unity of purpose by the time of the next legislature meeting. I do not think, however, that the question of the combining of the interests of the Engineers and Architects had anything to do with the law not being passed. There is no good explanation why the law didn't go through, except that the legislature was not smart enough to understand its advantages."

Mr. Foltz:

"Mr. Perkins knows and I know what was said on this subject at Nashville. I have begun to think that we are on the wrong track and we ought to substitute a State Building Code for the License Law. There would be a little better chance of getting that through. There would be a better chance of getting good men behind this movement, who would not be interested in getting a license law. I also think it would be good business sense to combine it with the Engineers, but it does not look possible now."

PUBLIC ACTION COMMITTEE.

Mr .Turnock:

"There is nothing doing. There has not been anything new."

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE.

President Wickes:

"Gentlemen, Mr. Griffin, Chairman of this committee, has been in the Service in England, and we are glad to welcome him back with us."

Mr. Griffin:

"Gentlemen: The Indiana Society of Architects has been advertised in England. I do not know how you would say it has been advertised, whether well or not, but it was advertised in England all right. (Laughter). The Indiana Society will have to provide for some expenditure of money. It is very hard to get any publishing done unless we expend some money on it. Until some action is taken, I do not think we can do very much."

President Wickes:

"The Publicity Committee should make recommendations and ask for what they want. Take the lead and make demands upon the Society."

Mr. Donald Campbell, (Editor, Indiana Construction Recorder):

"Mr. President; Gentlemen: It is difficult for a man, without the pale of your profession, to write architectural items that will have a touch of authority back of them, a tone to them. I have tried to please. I would like to have members of the Society, when something comes up, send in sketches or suggestions. It seems to me that if the Architects will submit articles, we would be able to get reports on conditions all over the State, good material for publicity for the profession and matter of general interest to Architects and Contractors. We shall be only too glad to print it. We would like to run a sort of Bulletin formed of features around the State, little happenings, and things pertaining to the practice."

President Wickes:

"Gentlemen, this is a very good suggestion. All those present please take notice. The Indiana Construction Recorder is a good medium to work through—that is why it was adopted for our Official Organ."

ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE.

President Wickes:

"Mr. Foltz's report has been spread about us. Mr. Foltz, you have a very successful report."

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

Mr. Herbert Bass:

We, the committee appointed by the President to make nominations for offices and directors for the Indiana Society of Architects for the year 1919-20, beg to submit the following nominations:

For President—E. Hill Turnock, Elkhart, Ind.
For Vice-President—Chas. E. Scott, Terre Haute, Ind.
For Second Vice-President—A. A. Honeywell, Kokomo, Ind.
Secretary—Merritt Harrison, Indianapolis, Ind.
Treasurer—Geo. F. Bass, Indianapolis, Ind.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

Entertainment—Chas. Brossman.
Membership—A. Frank Wickes.
Legislation—Chas. R. Weatherhogg.
Publicity—Herman Scherrer.
Pageants and Exhibits—O. C. Brubaker.
Public Action—Warren D. Miller.

BOARD OF ARBITRATION.

We recommend that the present Board of Arbitration be continued with the substitution of the names of R. F. Daggett and J. W. Gaddis for those of Messrs. Turnock and Snader, the former having been nominated for President and Mr. Snader having left the state.

Respectfully submitted.

HERBERT L. BASS.
HERBERT FOLTZ.

By due motion and second, the report of the Nominating Committee was accepted, the nominations were declared closed, and all those whose names were presented by the Nominating Committee, were declared elected by unanimous ballot.

President Wickes:

"Mr. Turnock, I want to extend you congratulations as the new president of the Indiana Society of Architects. Consider yourself conducted to the office."

Mr. Turnock:

"It certainly is very unexpected. I am just a little of the opinion that you ought to have selected one here in the center of the state. I will, however, do all I can to perform the duties imposed upon me. I haven't been very well for sometime past, and that is why I did not attend the last meeting, but my health is better now, and this will be a good opportunity for me to resume my activities. I thank you very much for the honor." (Applause.)

"Mr. Turnock, I felt a little that way myself during the last three months. The war is over now and I feel that every man of us is determined in his heart to give the Society his very best support."

NEW BUSINESS.

Mr. Harrison:

"This evening we are going out to the Indianapolis Athletic and Canoe Club, to leave directly after this meeting, and you men here with machines please arrange to take somebody else out with you, as the street car facilities out that way are not very good. Mr. Perkins will be there this evening and address us. We will also have other addresses and moving pictures of the Indiana Limestone District.

I might say in connection with the secretary's work that it has been pretty hard in some cases to get the notices out and get the programs arranged as we should and the work to be done right needs the attention of a person who can devote more time to it, who has a chance to think more about it, and to do a lot of work that is necessary to be done. It is almost impossible for me, with the press of business, to give it the time it should have, and therefore, I think if possible, the Society should provide a Financial Secretary to take care of it, who will look after the details of the work, and I believe we can get more efficient service in that way. I believe more data will be turned out for members of the Society and articles written up for the Indiana Construction Recorder."

President Wickes:

"It is up to the Board of Directors to name the Financial Secretary and fix his salary."

By motion the afternoon session adjourned to reassemble at 6:00 P. M. for dinner at the Indianapolis Athletic & Canoe Club.

The recess hours were spent by the Architects in autoing about the city terminating at the Canoe Club where sociability and informal discussions were indulged in until it was announced that dinner was ready. This annual banquet was a most enjoyable function and was followed by a series of entertaining talks and discussions.

When the tables had been cleared President Wickes called the convention to order, announcing that later in the evening he would turn over the chair to the newly elected president, Mr. E. Hill Turnock.

President Wickes:

"I think this is a marked event in the history of the Indiana Society of Architects. I have had a splendid time and I think you all feel likewise. We have with us this evening Mr. H. H. Friedley, State Fire Marshal of Indiana, who will now speak to us, on the Building Code.

The State Building Code is a thing in which we are very much interested. We are interested in the welfare of the state, and we shall endeavor to be of service in whatever manner we can to the State."

ADVOCACY OF STATE BUILDING CODE.

Mr. Friedley:

"Mr. President and gentlemen: I do not want to burden you with statistics tonight because I think this is more of a festive occasion than for the studying of any statistics. But you know what a good building is and I do not think that we will ever be able to reduce the awful fire loss that inflicts our country until architects lead in the way of getting better building construction. The facts are that we have conflagrations that are spread by the shingle roof, and we are confronted with great problems when we attempt to do away with it. The lumbermen have insisted that shingles are more inferior than other roofs, yet we find them hanging to the idea that we are trying to destroy their business when we want to do away with the shingle roof. I had some lumbermen approach me a few days ago and say that the Fire Marshal, through the state machinery, was injuring their business, pleading with me not to urge the abolition of shingle roofs.

Now, you as architects know that this type of roof is the cause of such great conflagrations as we have had in Atlanta, Ga., Chelsea, Mass., and Paris, Tex. What is to take its place? The architects and builders ought to find something that would take the place of the wood shingle and prevent the great loss that is brought about by this menace. What is going to take the place of lumber when it is so high it cannot be used to build with? What are you, as architects, going to advocate that will lessen the fire hazard, and have the general public use as a better, safer material than wood?

Innovations Slow to Take Hold.

A few years ago, when we first began to manufacture Portland cement people stated that it would soon take the place of all wood and when we see the buildings that have been built of concrete it seems that they were right in that, but, such innovations come slow, I mean, in a general way. It is being adopted in such buildings as this one, but, generally speaking, it is not being used when it should be. Now architects will lead in that movement, and they must do that in order to manufacture and bring about a business feeling that will finally result in the establishment of a Building Code. I do not believe that we could ever get a Building Code in Indiana if the architects were opposed to it. Why? Because if you are going to present plans which call for shingle roofs we are going to have a hard time passing a Building Code which will prevent their use.

You architects had something to introduce at the last legislature. I have said to some of your members that if you had brought that in earlier in the session it would have stood some show of being passed. You architects should stand together, so that there would be no building rule passed until you had passed the Building Code. You architects should get together and have the legislature fall in with your ideas, and let those ideas be so that the common people, the ordinary builder, the ordinary home builder in the small town will become interested in securing the passage of the Building Code.

It may be a secret to you, but I think I showed Mr. Harrison the bill I had up for consideration at the last session of the legislature and which passed the Senate unanimously, passed the House 84 to 11 and came up to the Governor and he vetoed it. There was (I shall not call it a "nigger in the woodpile") but a "little soldier" in that it provided that no public building could be built without first submitting the plans to the Fire Marshal for approval in so far as they related to the fire hazard of the building, and then the little joker was down below, that "A building in which people were employed or no business building could be built without the approval of the Fire Marshal."

Gentlemen, if we could have gotten that bill approved, the first thing you architects knew, we would have drafted a building law and have entered it as one of the rules and regulations of the Building Code of Indiana. I made the mistake. I put in that bill a provision that for this extra labor and work the Fire Marshal was to receive an additional $1,500 for his salary. The Governor thought the Fire Marshal already got enough for his salary. As far as I was concerned, he was entitled to his opinion, and he held the cards and vetoed the bill. If that bill had gone through the Fire Marshal's office would have asked for the help and assistance of the architects of Indiana, and might have called in some from Chicago. (Turning to the guest of the evening, Mr. Perkins.)

We now have rules and regulations regarding the building and construction of garages, that is because they use inflamable oil and the Fire Marshal shall have authority to regulate the construction of them. That brings the automobile and garage under the jurisdiction of the Fire Marshal, and we have tried to get better garages. If my predecessor had begun immediately after issuing those rules, over six years ago, to enforce them and encouraged architects and owners accordingly Indiana would have had the best garage construction of any state in the Union. Steam heat was cheap, building was cheaper than it is now. If we had built garages with the idea of safety, Indiana would not have had 74 burn year before last at a loss of $750,000. Last year 64 burned, and already this year we have had about 23 garage fires.

Urges Architects to Lead.

Now, gentlemen, you know more about this than I do, you know more about it than I could tell you if I were to try to study up on it for a month. You gentlemen, as citizens of Indiana, are interested in its upbuilding, in its buildings, and know they ought to be built safer and better. We want you to lead in it. I am not criticizing you architects, but I just want to give you an example of how you can lead in this work. The other day an architect showed me plans and specifications of a garage, in which a furnace was recommended instead of steam heat or hot water, and instead of steel beams he had light construction of wood and it was inferior in every way. I said to him, 'Why don't you build a better building than this. If you can't get steel, why don't you put in ten inch beams so that in case of a fire the fire department can get there before they burn in two.' He said, 'I am afraid to present such plans to my client because it would cost so much I wouldn't get the business.' I asked him to go and get the owner, and the first thing the man said was, 'Would it be better to put in steam heat? I want the best I can get, and I want it safe.' I scored that architect severely for not presenting to that man the best constructed building that he knew how to build. If the owner would not approve it, he could then put in something not quite so good.

I am not mentioning this as a criticism of architects, but let me tell you that sometimes you are mistaken in the idea that a man would not prefer to build a safer building. You would make a good point by making your best building plans first and then if necessary to do so, you could alter the plans.

Apalling Fire Loss.

I wish in Indiana, instead of $7,000,000 loss by fire yearly we could reduce it to $2,000,000 or less. Seven million dollars burned up last year and they are going this year, but when we reach the point where the people will beg and plead to be given safer buildings and when you architects insist on it, we will get some place, and working along this line, after a while we will get a good Building Code.

Building Codes are something fearfully and wonderfully made. I think we have a copy of one from Massachusetts, one from Michigan, one from Illinois, and I believe, one from Ohio. I tried to find a copy of one of the codes, but my secretary is away and I haven't been able to get hold of one since your secretary, one day last week, informed me that I was on the program for a talk tonight. However, you know how to get them, if you want them.

Let me say that if the Fire Marshal can be of any assistance to you, do not hesitate to call on him. I might say that during the last legislature a good many of the legislators made my office their headquarters, and if there is anything we can do to help you architects, just call on us.

Gentlemen, I thank you, and wish you all well." (Applause)

President Wickes:

"We are very glad to have had this talk from Mr. Friedley and it is something by which I hope we can profit. Mr.

Friedley has extended an invitation to consult with him and I hope our members will avail themselves of this opportunity."

ENGINEER SPEAKS ON LICENSE LAW.

President Wickes:

"Gentlemen, Mr. Luten will talk to us on the possibilities of a License Law to regulate the practice of architects in Indiana.

Mr. Luten:

"Mr. President and Gentlemen: I have often been styled a 'Bridge Architect.' I do not consider myself an architect because of that, and I am here merely as a representative of the engineers. I have been on the Committee of the American Association of Engineers. The objects and purposes of a License Law will always be the same for architects and structural engineers.

We have all of us lived to see the time when the license law has become a very popular one. Twenty or twenty-five years ago there was very little mention of it. Illinois was perhaps the first state, twenty-two years ago, to establish a law to license architects. Fifteen states have since passed laws licensing architects. Last year Oregon, Idaho, Iowa and Michigan passed such a legislation. We are having some difficulty in Indiana in passing a license law, but we are not going to stop, we are going to keep on trying.

Such a license law should be boiled down to a few essentials. I want to try to present them to you.

1. An Examining Board.
2. Definition of license, so that the courts may bar out those not licensed.
3. A fine or punishment or prohibition against those who are not licensed.

The Indiana law as proposed was quite complicated; it had possibly twenty clauses, where these three must be held to be sufficient.

Under that first head of an Examining Board, there is another head of Qualifications of Architects. This may run into considerable ramifications. An examining board may ordinarily be given right to fix the qualifications that applicants should be required to have. Briefly they may be stated:

Shall be a person of 21 years of age.
Business and previous experience.

Those things are written into laws ordinarily.

The question will arise as to whether an architect licensed under the laws of Illinois shall be permitted to practice in Indiana without examination. The details of the examination cannot be written in the law, however there must be some rules set out and the examination not merely left to the judgment of the board itself.

There is another feature that comes in here, that is, the 'Grandfather Clause.' The law should provide that all those who are practicing when the law is passed, or those practicing for the first six months after the passage of the law, should not be required to pass the examination. If you do not have the 'Grandfather Clause' it would be impossible to pass the law. Perhaps if a license law were in effect, a good many of you gentlemen present would not be able to pass an examination. You may be a thoroughly competent architect, but to go through with an examination, you might be asked a great many questions that you would not now be able to answer correctly.

Now taking up the second heading or definition of a license; that is, how our courts are to determine whether or not a man is practicing architecture when the law reads that he shall not do so without a license. Suppose we define in the bill an architect as a man who designs buildings and you exclude all who do not have a license. Obviously a man who wants to design a building for himself will object. Define him as one who designs buildings for others, and then what about a man who wants to do contract work and at the same time to build. He will oppose that bill. Suppose then we make the definition to read as one who designs buildings for others, to be erected by others than himself, or one who plans or supervises buildings or installations or modifications and which are to be built by others than himself. There is another way to avoid the issue, and that is to include builders as well as designers.

Although engineers and architects can combine forces, it is difficult to combine their examinations. We might subdivide engineering or architecture and give an examination for each man doing a special line work, for instance, one man applies for license for bridge engineering, one for structural engineering, one for surveying, etc., and each gets an examination for that particular class of work.

In some of the states the laws require registration instead of licensing, thus we have a "Registered Architect" or a "Registered Engineer," which would permit the person registered to engage in any part of these professions, but by licensing I mean to license a man to perform that particular work, and to exclude all men who are not licensed.

It becomes necessary to have a fee, which might be $100 or $500 for practicing, and all who wish to practice would be compelled to secure a license and to take an examination and pay this fee. The tendency is to make the fee as low as possible.

The Indiana law required a fee of $50, and the license has to be renewed every year, it is quite proper that the renewal fee should be lower.

The whole question must be the consideration of the public. No other argument has any material weight with the legislature. Now it is with regret that we architects and engineers who have co-operated for the past two years were just a little bit too late in getting before the legislature. We have made a firm resolve to be sitting on the doorstep when the next legislature opens. I think we should ask Mr. Friedley for desk room in his office also, and get some friends in the legislature." (Applause).

President Wickes:

"I think we all agree that whatever we do we ought to get at it soon. Mr. Weatherhogg, past chairman and also present chairman of this legislative committee, is not present, but we should like to hear from other members on this subject."

Mr. Harrison:

"In Illinois there has been a fight continuously, as I understand it, between the architects and engineers. If not combined you are having two boards passing on the examination of those men and they are examined on practically the same things, therefore the two boards create only additional expense. It seems to me that in this state if we co-operate we can have one examining board with probably different examinations for different professions, and we will be able to eliminate that condition and at the same time accomplish the same thing. I know there has been some discussion and some criticism among the architects about combining the architects' and engineers' bill. I believe that ought to be seriously considered and we ought to know just where we stand before we approach another legislature. If there are any ideas as to the changing of that bill, or making them two separate bills, I believe it ought to be brought out now and if architects here have ideas that are different, I believe we ought to hear them. The Indiana problem ought to be solved and we ought to know where we are before going to the legislature, and not get into the confusion as has been the case in Illinois."

Mr. Brossman:

"The idea has already been brought out that the reason for the bill not passing the last legislature was not because of a combined bill, but because it was delayed in presentation. We should get to work early and get the right man to father the bill and see that it gets the proper introduction into the House and the Senate, and also have the bill gone over with the Governor in a conference before the legislature convenes so that it will meet with his approval. Then we should get started in accordance with Mr. Friedley's suggestion."

Mr. Honeywell:

"I think a questionnaire should be sent out to each of the architects over the state and ascertain their views as to what this bill ought to be. If I was to speak my own thought, it would be that I would much prefer a registration law to a license law. Possibly there might be others the same way. I think that the name "Architect" should be protected and if the name "Architect" is protected, we have asked all that we ought to ask. While I would favor a license law over what we have, and would support it, it does not represent my idea as to what is best. We, as architects, do not care to go through with an examination such as we wish to impose on somebody else who might live in another state, and I feel if it would be unfair to us it would be unfair to the other fellow. It seems to me that the license law system has some elements of unfairness and I believe that the question ought to be considered carefully in the interval before the legislature meets. For instance, the license laws of other states ought to be studied to see whether they are the ideal way of securing the things we are after."

Mr. Luten:

"I think the license law should be an expression of the architects and engineers. I think public opinion would not result in any opinion at all, for no one on the outside is willing to give so complicated a bill thorough study. I think the advantages of a license law over a registration law could be set forth in this question, "Do you wish anyone who has perhaps had some architectural training, but who does not practice architecture to be free to compete with you at any time?" For instance, suppose a man, who has at one time designed a building, does not follow the profession, but designes picture frames for ten years, then some friend asks him to design a structure and make plans. All he needs to do is to call himself an architect, and his registration permits him to design the house, but the license law prevents it. In regard to the question of unfairness of asking someone else to do what we do not want to do ourselves, we do not mean that the license law shall compel those to pass an examination who are now practicing architecture and are competent. If we did that some of us here tonight would not be able to qualify. I, myself, could not pass an examination. I can't pass an examination for an engineer's license in some other state, but I am not afraid of getting in on my experience."

President Wickes:

"Gentlemen, we are greatly honored tonight by having with us a speaker from Chicago, and I am sure that we are to hear a message from him that will do us all good, on the subject, 'Post War Work.' Mr. Dwight L. Perkins is a member of the Illinois Chapter of the Institute and a member of the Illinois Society of Architects. Mr. Perkins I hope you will take all the time you wish and speak to us as long as you want and say anything you desire to say."

PROMINENT NATIONAL ARCHITECT EXPOUNDS BROAD ARCHITECTURAL GOSPEL.

Mr. Perkins:

"Gentlemen, and members of the architectural profession: I wish that I might convey some impression of my feeling of the community of interest and unity of our aims and purposes which Mr. Kimball President of the American Institute, conveyed to the Illinois Society of Architects at its annual meeting last Tuesday evening in Chicago. I shall touch somewhat later on the subject, announced by your president, of Post War Work, but as a preface to that, I am going to tell you a little bit about what Mr. Kimball said to help to convey his welcome to you to enter the Institute. The theme upon which Mr. Kimball spoke last Tuesday evening was the attitude of the American Institute towards state societies. He took up the resolutions submitted at the last meeting, which was held in Nashville the last day of April and first few days of May. This Illinois resolution presented to the board prior to the convention said in effect, "We, the American Institute, favor the organization of state societies." The board referred it to the convention and the convention passed it, expressing their approval of the idea. The point involved was briefly this: In Illinois and in many states, there are two local societies, one is the Chapter of the American Institute and the other the Society. The distinct difference lies in the conditions of membership. As you all know, to become a member of the Illinois Chapter or any Chapter elsewhere of the Institute, involves some standing, some record in the profession and in the community and presupposes an examination by a committee who shall look into your work and your record and carries with it an endorsement of your position in the profession and in the community. It is supposed to be a little bit difficult. It is supposed to be an honor to be admitted as a member into the American Institute.

The ability of an architect to put A. I. A. after his name should mean, and generally does mean, particularly if he is a new member and does not come in under the 'Grandfather Clause,' actual experience, ability and position. The Illinois Society is distinctly this, and we may say briefly that any person having a license to practice architecture in the state of Illinois or having established himself through local conditions in some other state enables him to become a member of the society. The Illinois Society has from the beginning been composed of the business interests of the profession. That society started out, and for many years was known as 'The Chicago Architects Business Association,' but later changed its name. It is still understood that it would come under the head of the business side of the Fine Arts, and as the Illinois Chapter of the American Institute it was this. What could have been more encouraging than for Mr. Kimball at the annual meeting last Tuesday to speak on the subject that he did?

Tom Kimball is bold and unconventional if he is anything, and he said in the beginning, 'I shan't speak to you simply as the President of the American Institute of Architects, but as T. R. Kimball of Omaha, Neb.' I am going to give you the last sentence that he made—'If I had my way there would be just two classes of architects in the country, those who are members of the American Institute or Architecture and those who had been members.' Think about that a little. Those who had been and presumably now were not, would of course be those who had been kicked out. He would abhor all the highbrow tests for members in the American Institute. He would have us, through the members of our organization, regulate the fitness of the people who build. He would have us through our license boards or through our laws, like those of Ohio, protect the interests of the public.

Now I want to speak for him and for myself just a moment and say that it is time we stopped talking about the interest of the architect and the interest of the engineer, and time that we first, last, and always, talk about the interest of the public and the ability to serve them, not only from our technical training, but the ability to let them know we have that training. We should have building codes to protect the public against dangerous buildings. I hold that the public has no right through the legislature or through the government to meddle with design any more than to say that I shall wear a white bow tie or a blue bow tie, but, the Government has the right to say that every citizen shall be protected against weak, unsanitary, or combustible buildings.

How shall we go about this? (I shall talk for Mr. Kimball and for myself also.) On this question I shall speak only a few minutes, and, I speak from experience of the past, as a member of the firm which I represent and is now practicing in Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, Indiana and Ohio. I do not need to tell you our experience in Indiana. You recognize at once that I need nothing further than to pass Dr. Hurty's examination as to the health requirements, which takes a few minutes. In Ohio where I was about to do some work, it took us ten weeks to get our plans approved at Columbus, Ohio, and every little detail and all specifications had to be gone into and approved by John Quincy Adams and others of the Board at Columbus, Ohio. It does not matter a rap whether I know that a beam should be laid flat or upright, in Ohio as in Michigan and Wisconsin I do not worry about the business at all. That again is a matter of method.

I would like to add by way of parenthesis, that a license or building code does not make sales for an architect or engineer if we aren't smart enough to show the public what we have, and an engineer or architect who does not take that attitude deserves to starve and very soon will.

We haven't a building code in Illinois, but we are like the little girl who was sent out to find her sunbonnet. After she had been gone quite a while and looked all around for it, she came back and announced that she had almost found it, but she had not found it. This is exactly the condition we are in with reference to the passing the building code in the state of Illinois, we almost have it. The last legislature appointed a committee to report on it at the next session, two years hence.

According to Tom Kimball, everybody who may want to design a building for himself or for somebody else should submit to an examination and be subject to the approval of the American Institute of Architects. He holds to the conviction that any person that can be admitted to the Illinois Society of Architects, or the Indiana Society of Architects, and who is permitted to go on and practice should be capable of doing his work in the way that will prove the greatest service to the public. I feel free, therefore, within the strict bound of propriety, to invite all of you to become members of the American Institute, all of you who are not already members.

Now, I will come to the subject which was assigned to me, the Post War Committee Work. I represented the Illinois Chapter on this committee. There were two members, Max Dunning, Chairman, and myself, but Max Dunning is claimed by a great many of the other states. I attended one or two of the executive committee meetings in Philadelphia, and spent seven months in Washington. The Post War Committee is going to try to find out how to bring about the kind of action which we have been talking about the last few minutes. The Post War Committee is going to find out how to secure the assistance of the legislature, and get political action on the part of architects. Let us get out of our professional shell. Do not think I am not interested in the art of architecture. I think I would practice if I had so much money I did not have to. I love to build. More than loving to build, I think I love to serve society. I am just beginning to complete thirty years of combined professional and political activity.

If any of you have read Section 8 of the Chicago Building Ordinance which relates entirely to schools, I wrote that clause, and I worked side by side with the political leaders of the different parties, but they did not know what my political views were. It was through political machinery that I was able to get this clause of the Building Ordinance passed. The only way to do effective work is through the assistance of the political organizations.

I said to your president before I started to talk this evening, 'Shall I ride my usual hobby, which I have done for over thirty years, or not?' He said, 'Yes,' but didn't warm up over the subject and I began to wonder why. I think I have been finding out a good deal this afternoon. I had in mind to talk politics to you, but I think I have learned something about politics myself since I have been with you. I was reminded of how six or seven years ago I worked to get a school building in Indiana, and after weeks and weeks with the school board, I finally got my plans approved, and was then told that they would not allow anyone but an Indiana architect to do this work. However, I did get a building the other day in Richmond.

I want to tell you of my experience with other men in making the acquaintance of the officials of the City Government of Chicago. Twelve or fourteen years ago there was established what we called "The Municipal Science Club," composed of five people, and I happened to be one of the five, and the first year we secured the appropriation of $10,000 to spend for public play grounds. Now we have $200,000 a year to spend for play grounds. This is not for the entire city, but for one section alone. We now have $11,000,000 with which to buy forest reserves, obtaining it through political machinery. In the last analysis it is because we believed in the power of political machinery and because we have stuck to it, that we have accomplished what we have. As an example of what we have been able to accomplish, we have laid out and beautified the grounds of the University of Chicago, Northwestern University and the University of Illinois.

Let us get out of the idea that we are practicing architecture to support our families. If we cannot make a living that way, we can in some other way. Let us simply regard ourselves as trained citizens and let us prove that we can do these things because we are trained, and let us use the forces of political machinery to gain the results, and go forward to serve our fellow man."

President Wickes:

We are very grateful for this very fine talk. I hope we may be able to build upon the foundation Mr. Perkins has given us.

FILING SYSTEM DISCUSSED.

President Wickes:

We have scheduled a paper now by Mr. Harrison on the subject of a filing system.

Mr. Harrison gave a very detailed report of the Dewey Decimal System of Filing, similar to that used in public libraries and which he has worked out to meet his needs in the filing of magazines, trade papers, etc., in order to have certain information acessible that is needed in the practice of architecture.

President Wickes:

"I was also put on the program to speak on Cost Systems. I would like to see the hands of the men who use Costs Systems in their offices. (Most of you, I see use cost systems.) I would like to ask you some questions in this talk. All agree that we are selling service. I do not think we have defined architecture or architectural practice to our own satisfaction or the satisfaction of our clients. We should not try to get a lot of things for architects, but we should be more anxious about the public. A man comes to you first with a proposed building, and the first thing he wants is "service." We sell him counsel. I would like to have you tell me some of the other things you sell him.

It is the thought of a great many architects that we are selling blue prints and specifications. A man comes into your office and wants only a pencil drawing, for he places no value upon it. He imagines it is very expensive to produce a blue print, at costs from $35 to $75 or $500, and sometimes they are mighty poor at that.

What are the things that we sell?

Counsel.
Experience of our organization.
Benefit of our own personal experience.

We all should formulate a standard cost system. Costs must be based upon salaries—accurate accounting takes into consideration the superintendency of the work, writing specifications, office rent, heat, light, etc., over years, months, weeks, etc. My own work I classify as "counsel." I keep an exact record of every piece of work that we have under way, and at the end of each week, we know just what to charge against each job. I know how much time I have spent, whether I have spent my own time going to Chicago to buy something, for that particular job, all of which is charged against the job. I can tell any time what that job has cost. When the job is all done I can compare with another job where the same material will be supplied and the same class of work specified, and I can better figure on what to charge. If I lost money on this one, I will try not to lose money on another. I just completed a job where I lost $150. I shall try to see that that does not happen again. I may raise the rate. I do not always lose money on a job."

At the conclusion of Mr. Wickes' speech, Mr. W. M. Richter, secretary of the Stone Club, Bedford, Indiana, gave a lecture on the stone industry accompanied by moving pictures, covering the various phases of the production of stone building materials, which proved highly educational and entertaining.

Adjournment was then taken, the question of the next meeting place being deferred until a later date.

THE ARCHITECT

Subject of Constructive Criticism by One of the Profession

It seems to me that, all summed up, everything considered, service should be the slogan, the watchword and the battle cry of the architect, and efficiency his aim in rendering the highest quality of that service. He is not manufacturing a certain grade of goods that the public can buy or leave alone; rather is he creating something special in every case that should be pre-eminently suitable to the particular purpose or wants of the client.

How thoroughly does the average architect do this?

All too often he deems the client merely a necessary, evil, a nuisance; his lofty ambition is to erect beautiful buildings, monumental exteriors to his own skill in copying the work of masters of past times and conditions. He brings neither the experience with the varied problems of business or other specialized buildings, nor the earnest study these would justify, to bear upon the solution of the problem in hand.

He worships too fervently at the shrine of the Front. The plan, the client's greatest wants, the prime purpose of the building, the cost, the revenue, all must be beaten into shape or sacrificed to fit some wondrous exterior copied from great antiquity.

Strange what a facination the past has for us. The old boys of æons ago, other climes and times, built beautifully and appropriately to their times and climes. Their temples and tombs were refined, graceful, marvels of "frozen music," as architecture has been most aptly termed. Sometimes it took centuries to build those structures. Time counted for little. The world was leisurely romantic and offered much incense to the arts. But tell me, what sense is there in attempting to beat our intensely practical, rushed, modern and climatic requirements, every blessed one of them, into the external shape of some tomb or temple of B. C., times? Frankly, loving the classic as I do, enraptured as I am over it in its natural surroundings and settings, I've gotten so that, as beautiful and perfect as you can make a classic design, I am soured on it, tired and weary and sick at seeing modern office buildings, churches, schools, theaters, warehouses, residences, stables and dog kennels all a la Baths of Diocletian or Temples of Diana. Why not be consistent and clothe the ticket seller at your classical railway stations and the elevator boys at your temple-like office buildings in Roman togas, fillets, and sandals?

Granted that the wondrous buildings of the Chicago World's Fair and some of our great governmental structures gracefully fill and fit the classic garb borrowed from antiquity, still it at least shows most appalling paucity of expression that we should continue to follow that style right along and force it to do duty to our every need.

We go at architecture from the wrong angle, and the results are a bit heart-breaking. Grave errors and bungles are common in every profession and trade, for human nature is indeed most fallible, but it seems to be that in no profession are errors so common as in ours, unless it be in the medical one, and there they can at least bury their mistakes out of sight. No other profession involves so much detail, the blending of so many lines, the keeping together, the harmonizing of so many different forms of human endeavor, but all that presupposes the greater skill and more earnest preparations for all calling, yet as a matter of fact and as exacting as are our duties, no profession is easier to butt into than is architecture. And there is so little check upon those errors until it is too late to mend them. Plans are something of a mystery to the average client. He sees a drawing showing a lot of rooms opening into a light-court, the latter is labeled "light," therefore he surmises that "light" really means light. Only when the building is completed does he realize that 3 ft. of space between two buildings 10 stories high doesn't really mean bona fide light. The architect should know it, but he wants light there, and fondly deludes himself that marking it on the plans will produce it in reality.

So with the costs. A man has $10,000 to spend on a building and for that $10,000 he'd like to get $20,000 of building. The architect aids and abets the illusion. He really hopes to produce the miraculous and he's afraid that if he doesn't promise the client the earth with a chunk of moon thrown in, his client will go elsewhere. The miracle is never performed. To get anywhere nearly what he wants, Mr. Owner will spend $30,000 perhaps where his architect talked $10,000. The profession gets cussed accordingly. I submit the architects should know the real cost of construction and should tell his client the whole truth.

So few prospective builders really understand a plan when they see it that it is not reasonable to expect an owner to know whether those plans truly supply their needs, whether they conform to the building code or not, whether the building will receive a high or low rate of insurance, whether it will really be fireproof or not, whether the construction is regular or expensively special, whether the light will be good or poor; all these things are left confidingly to the architect. Sometimes he manages to take good care of them, and other times he falls down miserably in one and often in a dozen particulars.

It is conceded that not one architect in a hundred really appreciates the importance of fireproof construction or knows all about its very simple essentials. At least the facts are that in this entire country, with something like 20,000,000 buildings in it, there are but 40 really fireproof buildings and certainly not over 8,000 fairly fire-resisting ones.

The profession's sins of commission and omission are indeed many and costly. Ornament is applied and where it adds nothing to the appearance of the building just increased cost, waste; materials excessively strong in one place and barely adequate in another; so many rooms crowded in that the light space is insufficient for the entire building, resulting in large unrentable areas; arrangement sacrificed to external appearance; I have dozen of cases in mind where one or two rooms to every story in a tall building have been sacrificed, utterly spoiled, in order to get in some fool column or arch on the sacred "front." Everything is subservient to that "front"; and there's the inadequately heated building and the over-heated building; the leaky roof, the damp walls, the undrained cellar. And the sins of omission; forgotten details, the hastily written or form-specification, made to do duty for every class of building, the inaccurate plans, the extras, the fusses with the buildings, the loss of time, rent and interest.

The architect should be artist and business man combined. His is not the function of merely interpreting a dream, as does a sculptor or painter, giving tangible expression to his thoughts and selling the product to whomsoever has the price; he does not build fantasies, buildings, and then place them upon the market. His function is infinitely more specific, more real, more commercial, if you will. The purpose of a building is decided upon before he is called in, it is very definite, it rarely is purely monumental, and almost invariably a building is planned to produce revenue, or to house some special function in life, a home, a house of worship, whose occupants have especial needs or notions and limitations that must be served. His is the task of putting those ideas into reality, of producing that revenue, of making convenient and easy of operation that factory or school. Advantages must be taken of the site already selected or owned, consideration must be given to the surroundings; a perfect structure, with all its complexity of details and specialties, must be produced, and the whole must be kept within a limit of cost that has been prophesied, anticipated by the architect. On top of all that, if he be a true architect, he will make that building beautiful, whatever its purpose, whatever its cost, however humble it may be. And such a task elevates his work into the most ideal, the noblest, the grandest, the finest of the fine arts, and, without exception, the greatest and most complex of all the sciences, for it must take into account and actually comprehend at least the rudiments or some of the details of them all.

Sad to relate, however, distressingly few practitioners in our profession look at it that way, who seem ever to invert the process; they mistakenly put what they deem the "art" before the essentials, looking upon the latter as irksome, burdensome restrictions the owners of property cruelly put upon their great talent. To such an extent indeed that seven out of ten of them will begin the solution of a problem by blocking out a sketch of a beautiful exterior, a fine colonnade, an artistically balanced lot of "voids and solids," and then do their blamedest to beat the interior requirements into a shape that will fit that exterior.

All this may sound like a plaint, a bit of captious criticism, just fussing with the architects. I've told you before that I believed in constructive criticism; I show the sore simply that it may demonstrate the need of a salve or cure, and this paper, instead of being merely critical, is a most earnest and prayerful exhortation to the architects to devise and supply a cure, but it will have to be a mighty one, for it must be calculated to save the profession. In every large city one sees what is becoming of the architect. He is becoming the hired man of the big construction companies.

Many things are to blame for all this, some troubles within the profession and some outside. Among the latter is that the public is not discriminating in selecting an architect. Here is an example; it's a silly performance, but not at all out of the ordinary: A lady in Washington is going to build quite a mansion and has selected her architect. The man has done fairly good commercial work, but he never did a decent house in his life. Curiosity was eating me up and I asked her how she had made the selection. Her naive reply was that, not knowing any of them and getting such varied advice from her friends, she just took the directory and picked out a name that sounded artistic and clever, and the fellow certainly has a flossy, artistic hyphenated cognomen—albeit he didn't happen to pan out according to his ma's specification.

Some internal troubles are directly attributed to the schools. It sounds paradoxical and it is so, but they, the schools, are too severely academic. They give the wrong angle to the whole subject of architecture. The youngster is allowed to dally with castles and grand operas and just the fluff of architecture, and from the very first is impressed with the idea that Art is the Front, and that the proper way of putting up a good front is to make as nearly a copy as one can of something else done for an entirely different purpose 2,000 or 3,000 years ago.

Modern construction is looked upon as the province of the engineer. Modern, commercial, educational, manufacturing and religious conditions are bugbears to be tolerated but not loved and, in fine, the youngster is treated as a mere purveyor of pretty frills for a building, while his real task is far ahead and above that. He should be a creator, an artist if you wish, but also he must be intensely practical.

How many of us live up to that specification? All who feel that they are fully up to the standard may raise their right hands. Thank you, the ayes have it!

Aim by study and tireless effort to give your clients superior service, keep harping away at efficiency, be artistic but also be practical. True art in our line is to do all things well and to clothe perfectly articulated, muscled and fleshed skeletons in raiment that is suitable of today, and beautiful because it clearly expresses the purpose, the mode of life and character of the created thing. Take a larger part in public affairs, don't let the lawyers do it all; your training and your work fit you better than they are fitted to handle public improvements and the city's welfare.

Go after business legitimately and boldly. First prepare yourself to do your work well; do it so well that it speaks for itself and is your best recommendation and then tell people about it in a business-like manner. The rules of the Institute are no longer against advertising. After you've done some good work, tell people about it, advertise it in a straightforward, direct way that will challenge and make appeal to a direct business man.

I have an architect in mind in an Eastern city who never lacks good and profitable work. When he hears of a building project he sends an ad to the man—a letter, telling him what his rates are, what he has done, gives his bank and other references, solicits his business, and encloses a list of 86 buildings, important ones, too, 80 of which have been completed at within 3 per cent., one way or the other, of his estimates and with brief notes from the owners saying so. That's an infinitely more manly and businesslike proceeding and a far stronger appeal to a business man than a procession of sisters-in-law, reverend and Masonic friends coming in to tell one how pleased they would be to have the job given to So-and-So because he is such a nice man.—F. W. Fitzpatrick, in The Architect and Engineer.

AROUND THE STATE

Edwin S. Harter and Karl T. Whitney announce the formation of a partnership to be known as Harter & Whitney, 302 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Indianapolis. They will handle varied lines of high grade building materials.

J. G. Kraft, formerly of the architectural firm, Treadwell & Kraft, Indiana Harbor, has returned from fifteen months service in France and formed a partnership with Archt. K. D. Norris. The new firm is to be known as Norris & Kraft with offices in the Calumet Bldg., East Chicago.

Harding & Company, Indianapolis, formerly at 502 Chamber of Commerce, has removed to 202 Hume-Mansur bldg. W. N. Harding, Jr., has reorganized the firm and now has associated with him Mr. W. A. Kurman, formerly of the Hydraulic Pressed Brick Co. They have added face and common brick to their other clay product lines and installed an artistic display room at the new address.

Architect Charles W. Taylor, New Castle, has moved his office to 207-208 Union Block.

Architect H. M. Griffin, Connersville, has opened an office at 110 Eastern avenue.

Lieut. Charles Houck, Muncie, has returned from overseas where he served in the quartermaster's department and is about to open offices in the Vatet Building to resume his architectural practice.

Architects Reidel & Zink, Lafayette, have moved their office from the Ball Block, to 821-22 Lafayette Life Insurance Building, which was designed by them.

Architect Merritt Carr, Indianapolis, Ind., has resumed practice and opened an office at 656 Lemcke Annex.

COST ANALYSIS

Meeting to Set Forth Building Facts Postponed to July 16.

Every effort is being exerted by Secretary C. C. Pierson of the Building Contractors Association, Indianapolis, to make the cost analysis meeting of the building fraternity one of the most memorable gatherings ever held by the construction interests. The affair was set for July 9th, at the Lincoln Hotel, but owing to previous engagements many of those interested would have been unable to attend so the meeting was postponed to July 16th.

Lumber-men and other material supply dealers had been called to Kansas City, Chicago, St. Louis, Eastern and Southern cities to attend business conferences and, at their request, the postponement was made. It was figured that many of these men upon their return to Indianapolis would bring back valuable data that would shed much light on the present price levels and tend to explain the cause for the existing market quotations.

So much interest has been shown in the proposed meeting that every effort is being bent to get at the real facts as they prevail in construction circles relative to supply, production, labor conditions, freight rates and financial matters, all of which go to make up construction costs.

It is to be no Star Chamber session, instead, everything is to be in the open that the public may know exactly the why of prices and just what to expect where construction is concerned. In this way the prospective builder will be able to analyze the situation for himself and realize the fallacy of the notion of holding off for cheaper prices. When the prospective builder stops to consider all that enters into a construction operation and weighs the facts he will not labor under the impression that the "Build Now" slogan was seized upon selfishly by the building interests to further their own ends.

Bankers, contractors, architects, railroad and business men have shown a keen interest in the plan of the Building Contractors Association and are cooperating with Mr. Pierson. The Indianapolis Architects Association has appointed a committee to work with Sec'y Pierson in the move, and contractors and others have expressed a desire to take an active part in this important discussion.

DECIMAL SYSTEM

Of Filing Advocated by Archt. Harrison at Architects' Convention.

"In order that the architect may become active in civic affairs as proposed by Architect Perkins of Chicago, it is necessary for us to so arrange our offices and the details of our business, that they do not burden us or keep us worked down.

I want to present to you this evening a system that I believe is practical and will work out in the architect's business as successfully as it has in the libraries over the country.

I refer to the Dewey Decimal System. In this system the whole field of human knowledge has been classified and divided up into nine units, and in this general classification, the work of the architect does not necessarily have to be restricted to just his field, for this classification allows him to get the political, social, things, etc., as well as the Fine Arts.

These general classes are as follows:

0. GENERAL WORKS.
1. Philosophy.
2. Religion.
3. Sociology.
4. Philology.
5. Natural Science.
6. Useful Arts.
7. Fine Arts.
8. Literature.
9. History.

Architecture may come under Useful Arts or Fine Arts. It is the Useful Arts to which we will pay particular attention at first. This subject, Useful Arts, number 6 in the general outline, will be number 600 in the sub-division and under the sub-division will be the following:

600. USEFUL ARTS.
610. Medicine.
620. Engineering.
630. Agriculture.
640. Domestic Economy.
650. Communication, Commerce.
660. Chemic Technology.
670. Manufacturers.
680. Mechanic Trades.
690. Building.

Under this classification we will restrict ourselves to 620—Engineering, and 690—Building.

690. BUILDING.
691. Materials, Processes, Preservatives.
692. Plans and specifications.
693. Masonry, Plastering, etc.
694. Carpentry, Stairbuilding.
695. Roofing, Slating, and Tiling.
696. Plumbing, Gas and Steam Fitting.
697. Heating and Ventilating.
698. Painting, Glazing, Paperhanging.
699. Carbuilding.

CATALOG FILING OFTEN NEGLECTED.

We now come to the classification of our catalogs. In the average architect's office one sees a considerable amount of data, catalogs, etc., promiscuously thrown here and there, not properly filed away so that the particular data wanted can always be found in a particular place. Under the Dewey Decimal system different classifications of your business are in certain places. Through the training of a person in your office, (in my office I have been able to train a young lady), you will be able to have everything filed where it can easily be located when you want it. If a catalog comes into the office and I think she will need some help in classifying it properly, I usually mark across the catalog the position to which it should go, otherwise after I have read the catalog and gotten all the information I want from it, I merely toss it into the basket to be filed.

The catalogs are easily found under this decimal system. You can go to the files and get any catalog you have in mind because you have them properly classified. There is one thing very necessary in this or any other filing system, and that is that it must be kept up to date.

Under the Fine Arts, No. 7, in the general outline, and No. 700 in the sub-division, are the following classifications:

700. FINE ARTS.
710. Landscape Gardening.
720. Architecture.
730. Sculpture.
740. Drawing, Decoration, Design.
750. Painting.
760. Engraving.
770. Photography.
780. Music.
790. Amusements.

LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTURE IMPORTANT.

Landscape architecture is a subject that should receive more attention than it is at present receiving; it will in the future be looked upon as being more vital. At least, the architect should consider the landscape arrangement so that he can work with the landscape. He should be able to give his client regular advice along that line. Under this heading, we have the following:

710. LANDSCAPE GARDENING.
711. Public Parks.
712. Private Grounds, Lawns.
713. Walks, Drives.
714. Water: Fountains, Lakes.
715. Trees, Hedges, Shrubs.
716. Plants, Flowers, Conservatories.
717. Arbors, Seats, Outlooks.
718. Monuments, Mausoleums.
719. Cemeteries.

720. ARCHITECTURE.
721. Architectural construction.
722. Ancient and Oriental.
723. Medieval, Gothic.
724. Modern.
725. Public Buildings.
726. Ecclesiastic and Religious.
727. Educational and Scientific.
728. Residences.
729. Design and Decoration.

Under Architectural Construction, as compared to Building, there is a little confusion, and if you are not careful in filing, you will get the information incorrectly classified. Architectural Construction deals more with the method of construction as results of design, and Building deals with the process of construction. This will usually enable you to separate the two points.

INFORMATION READILY AVAILABLE.

In order to have our information available, we must bind our magazines. We very often forget where to go for information on a certain subject. By cutting up these magazines and binding the different parts after classifying them, we will be able to file the information where it will be easily found. For example, in the American Architect, one of our most popular magazines, which is devoted entirely to architectural plans, etc., you will find that six months an index is given for the six months previous. With this system of filing we can go through the index and place numbers on those subjects so that when that volume is cut up, it will be classified and the entire volume will be available when wanted.

This Dewey Decimal System of Filing is in use by practically all the libraries. The system is enlarged upon of course, as they may have quite a number of books by the same author on the same subject, still by this system they are able to pick out the particular volume that is wanted.

One of the finest things about this Dewey Decimal System is the extent to which you can go in the filing of work in your office. You can, by a little study and by a little thought in the matter, even go farther than is here outlined. In fact, Illinois University has in connection with this general work given on architecture, gone still further than Mr. Dewey did in his book.

Of course this cannot be done in one year, but I believe that every architect should work out some sort of system. I do not know of any other system that forms a better basis for filing than this, and I want to put particular emphasis on the value of filing catalogs, etc. If we are going to have an efficient office, we ought to be able to find catalogs, to find this or that when asked about certain matters. It often happens that it takes a whole office force to find a particular plan. You have here a general guide which has been efficiently worked out, and you can go ahead with it and fit it to yout office. I believe we as architects are too prone to think only of making drawings, etc., not thinking of the other things very very necessary in connection with our work."

INVESTIGATED, ADVANCE CONSTRUCTION REPORTS

That is the material from which the news columns of this publication are made.

Representatives of the RECORDER are continually calling on architects, contractors, public officials and owners in search of live, detailed construction news which is assorted under its proper head and arranged each week in a most convenient manner so that he who is interested in the Indiana Construction Industry may know at glance just what is going on in this line of endeavor that would interest him most.

These news items furnish leads unobtainable through any other news medium in the State and are invaluable to the Contractor, Manufacturer and Material-supply Man who is desirous of the opportunity of getting in direct contact with state building operations.

Those seeking news of certain cities and localities will find same under local headings where more complete details are given than in the classified columns.

BUILDING CODE

State Law Governing Indiana Construction Badly Needed.

Since neighboring states have seen the necessity for establishing state building codes for the protection and safety of their citizens, Indiana could well afford to give such legislation serious consideration.

In the larger cities of the state there are certain restrictions covering construction but, except for garages, school houses and flat buildings there are no state regulations. Owing to the inflamable contents of garages, fireproofing is required in their construction and they are under the jurisdiction of the State Fire Marshal. Flat Buildings and Tenement Houses are controlled by the State Housing Law. As for schools, the only state regulation relative to their construction pertains to the heating and ventilation and when the State Board of Health has passed favorably upon this feature of the plans nothing else matters concerning the construction. In contrast to school house building in Indiana, a prominent Chicago architect recently related his experience in Ohio where the entire plans had to be minutely approved. In Ohio, it took ten weeks to secure the approval of the state officials; in Indiana this same architect had plans for two $250,000 school buildings approved in about half an hour, all that was required being that the heating and ventilating scheme be properly approved by the State Board of Health.

Fireproofing is one of the prime requisites in Ohio school construction but in Indiana this feature is optional with the owner. It took a holocaust, that at Collingwood several years ago, when a school house was burned to the ground causing the death of several hundred little scholars, to awaken Ohio to her negligence. Will Indiana await such a fearful lesson before she acts in this all important matter?

Numerous states now have building codes and Illinois is working to that end. Ohio's code is most comprehensive in its scope giving the state the power to regulate the construction of theatres, churches, school houses, asylums, hospitals, homes, hotels, lodging houses, apartments and tenement houses, club and lodge buildings, workshops, factories and mercantile establishments, in fact, all buildings where numerous people live, congregate or are employed. This regulation incorporates general construction, sanitary conditions, provides for fire protection and prevention, the construction and erection of elevators, stairways and fire escapes in and upon all such buildings as are enumerated above. All plans have to be submitted to a State Board at Columbus, O., where every little detail and all specifications are gone into and approved before building operations can be begun.

A building code such as Ohio possesses tends to unify construction, protects the public against dangerous buildings and reduces the fire hazards to a minimum.

The larger cities in Indiana have been forced to adopt fire zones in lieu of a state building code to force fireproof construction, but in the smaller cities and out in the country, churches, stores, theatres, etc., are built regardless, the main idea being to secure a building as cheap as possible, small consideration being given to ventilation or protection from fire.

The architect is continually striving to protect and uphold his profession and the Indiana architect has endeavored for years to secure a license law all to no avail. The legislators looked upon such a law as class legislation and have continually turned it down. If the Indiana architect will get behind a move for the establishment of a State Building Code he will be rendering a great service to the commonwealth and indirectly be working to the betterment of his profession in that such a code will protect the citizens of the state and its requirements will force the architect to be thoroughly competent in order to secure approval of his plans and specifications. It will also insure to owners substantial and permanent buildings. In no way will it interfere with design, instead, it will but eliminate the shoddy construction, a lurking menace, that today is hidden beneath a pretty veneer, the exterior design.

Various state officials, city building inspectors, contractors and architects have expressed hearty approval of the idea for a state building code and an effort should be made to secure one at the earliest possible moment.

BROADER SCOPE

Architect Advocates More Latitude in Architectural Education.

V. A. Matteson

We do not need a new kind of school. What we need is a new kind of teacher and a new point of view ourselves, and (perhaps through us) a new point of view for the educators—not only architectural but general.

Many of our architectural schools are subordinate to colleges of engineering. This is wrong both for us, for the engineer, and for the public. The idea of the real master builder includes engineering in most of its branches, and this should be the point of view of educators of all kinds. We should approach the whole subject from this broad viewpoint, and include as integral with architecture those branches now called "engineering" that are really a part of the master builder's art, such as structural, electrical, sanitary, and ventilating engineering. My idea is that the so-called Engineering Division of the Construction Division of the Army was a truly architectural organization, embracing a much larger field of usefulness than what is now usually meant by architecture.

The question of the young man in the profession involves the eternal questions of self-interest or selfishness as against idealism and liberality. I confess I do not know the answer. I fancy the young man will still have to shift for himself as he has been doing all these ages in all lines of his endeavors at self-preservation. We can at least leave him alone—which we do not now, at lesat not "ethically."

ESCAPE FROM FIRE

Means of Egress Called for in Construction by State Law.

The Indiana laws call for the following provisions in construction as a means of escape from fire.

Every building used in whole or in part as a public or private institution, sanitarium, surgical institute, asylum, school house, dormitory, church, theater, public hall, place of assemblage or place of public resort, and every building in which persons are employed above the second story of a factory, workshop, or mercantile or other establishment, and every hotel, family hotel, apartment house, boarding house, lodging house, club house, or tenement house, in which persons reside or lodge above the second story, and every factory, workshop, mercantile or other establishment of more than two stories in height, shall be provided with proper ways of egress or means of escape from fire, sufficient for the use of all persons accommodated, assembled, employed, lodged or residing in such buildings. All rooms above the second story in such buildings shall be provided with more than one way of egress or escape from fire, placed as near as practical at opposite ends of the room and leading to fire escape on the outside of such building or to stairways on the inside, provided with proper railings. All outside doors subject to the provisions of this section shall open outward, and all windows open outward or upward. The proscenium, or curtain opening, of all theaters shall have a fire resisting curtain of some incombustible material, and such curtain shall be properly constructed and shall be operated by proper mechanism.

Fire Escapes.

In addition to the foregoing means of escape from fire, all such buildings as are enumerated above that are more than two stories in height shall have one or more fire escapes on the outside of each building. Such fire escapes as are provided for in this section shall be constructed according to specifications issued by (the) State Department of Inspection and accepted by the chief inspector, or approved by the fire chief, and shall be connected with each floor above the first, well fastened and secured by extending the bolts or fastenings entirely through the walls, and of sufficient strength, each of which fire escapes shall have landings or balconies guarded by iron railings not less than three feet in height, and embracing one or more windows at each story and connecting with the interior by easily accessible and unobstructed openings; and all the balconies or landings shall be connected by iron stairs, placed at a slant of not more than forty-five degrees, protected by a well-secured hand rail on both sides, with a sixteen-inch-wide drop ladder from the lower platform, reaching to the ground; except in cases of school buildings iron stairs shall extend to a ground landing, and no telegraph, telephone, electric light poles, trees or wire, signs or other obstructions shall interfere with the construction and use of any fire escape.

PLAN OF ESCAPES—APPROVAL.

Any other plan or style of fire escape shall be sufficient if approved by the chief inspector, but if not so approved the chief inspector may notify the owner, proprietor or lessee of such establishment or of the building in which such establishment is conducted, or the agent or superintendent, or school officer, or either of them, in writing, that any such plan or style of fire escape is not sufficient, and may by an order in writing, served in like manner, require one or more fire escapes as he shall deem necessary and sufficient to be provided for such establishment at such location, and (of) such plan and style as shall be specified in such written order. Each fire escape shall be of the plan and style in accordance with the above specifications. The windows or doors to each fire escape shall be of sufficient size and be located, as far as possible, consistent with accessibility from the stairways and elevators, hatchways or openings, and the ladder thereof shall extend to the roof. Stationary stairs or ladders shall be provided on the inside of such establishment from the upper story to the roof as a means of escape in case of fire.

INDIANA BUILDING

June Permits Show Increase, Prospects for July Bright.

Building permits from the larger cities of Indiana for the month of June show a big increase over the volume of business that passed through the city building inspection departments during the corresponding period last year. It must be remembered that a year ago government restrictions had been clamped down tight on building work and only essential construction was permitted to go ahead which accounts for the small figures last year.

However, this year's figures are encouraging in view of the prevailing high prices of materials and increased wages being paid to labor, all of which has sent construction costs skyward. It tends to show that many of those who were anxious to build have not been deterred by advanced costs.

Prices have held steady for the past few months with the exception of those on lumber which advenced sharply recently owing to a heavy demand on depleted stocks at the southern mills. The difficulty of securing labor at these mills and the high wages demanded has had a telling effect on prices in the lumber market. All quotations are ruling firm to strong, indicating no immediate break in the immediate future.

July should show good building returns as architects all over the state are busy on plans, to say nothing of a nice class of work that is now in the hands of contractors for estimates. There is a good volume of school house construction in prospect, the State Tax Board having passed favorably upon numerous projects. Factory improvements continue to appear for bids showing confidence of the industrial interests in the future. Mercantile buildings have not shown much activity but investment improvements have loomed up and are proceeding. Residential work has been delayed to a certain extent but is beginning to loosen up.

Following is the comment of the various building inspectors about the state:

Walter Dugan, Gary. "Best building year ever. The outlook very bright."

John Pinnick, Richmond. "Prospects fine for July building. Architects all busy. No labor trouble."

W. D. Teeple, South Bend. "Good prospects."

Lincoln D. Secrest, Terre Haute. "Plenty of money available but high cost of material and labor has had its effect on construction operations. Architects all busy and some good work in prospect."

Gustave Lindemann, Ft. Wayne. "Some very good prospects but building material being high has had its effect on some work which has not gotten under way."

INVESTIGATED, ADVANCE CONSTRUCTION REPORTS

That is the material from which the news columns of this publication are made.

Representatives of the RECORDER are continually calling on architects, contractors, public officials and owners in search of live, detailed construction news which is assorted under its proper head and arranged each week in a most convenient manner so that he who is interested in the Indiana Construction Industry may know at glance just what is going on in this line of endeavor that would interest him most.

These news items furnish leads unobtainable through any other news medium in the State and are invaluable to the Contractor, Manufacturer and Material-supply Man who is desirous of the opportunity of getting in direct contact with state building operations.

Those seeking news of certain cities and localities will find same under local headings where more complete details are given than in the classified columns.

USEFUL MEMORIALS

Not Mere Ornamentation But Utility Feature Most Important.

Now that peace has come, the boys have returned and are still returning by the thousands from war-riddled Europe, and the country is readjusting itself slowly but surely from a war basis to that attendant upon the normal pursuits of peace, serious consideration is being given to the erection of War Memorials as a tribute to those who fought and sacrificed that the great American ideals of freedom and democracy might be maintained.

The memorial idea swept like a wave over the country when the fighting was over. Various schemes were proposed for the establishment of testimonials to perpetuate the honor of the American boys who, in Europe, upheld the traditions handed down to them by their sturdy, fighting forefathers whose contention for freedom and justice for all threw off the yoke of tyranny in America one hundred and forty-three years ago. That selfsame contention manifested itself in the American soldier of 1919 who invaded Europe and crushed medievalism, tyranny of the worst sort, that the haughty Prussian sought to foist upon an unsuspecting world.

Liberty's highway is well defined in America by memorials and reminders that date back many years. What more fitting than that the people of this day should erect substantial and permanent memorials to the great achievements of the American soldier of the early Twentieth Century whose deeds contributed to the perpetuation of Liberty, glorifying it and making it world embracing?

MEMORIALS OF OTHER DAYS.

The Revolutionary War left to us such sacred treasures as Faneuil Hall, Independence Hall, Washington's home at Mt. Vernon, Jefferson's residence at Monticello, cradles, as it were, of Liberty. On down through the years are the various milestones of the progress of Freedom; mementos of the war of 1812, the Mexican War, the Civil War and the War With Spain. Most of these are monuments of granite, marble, or stone, cherished ornamentations but devoid of usefulness except that of recalling the valiant man or men who preserved to us the fruits of Liberty.

When the memorials, to commemorate the deeds of American heroes in Europe, were first proposed, emotionalism and precedent ruled and triumphal arches, monuments, etc., were shoved into the foreground for consideration. Then the boys came back to their various cities and towns, boys no longer but men of broad vision, clean cut and fit.

UTILITARIAN FEATURE APPEALED.

This is a practical age and the greatness of their adventure crept into the memorial scheme. Discretion ruled, resulting in the discarding of the proposition to erect beautiful monuments to the memory of the loved ones who remained "Over There," who "had gone West." Utilitarianism cried for consideration with beauty and now efforts are being made by committees, city councils and other public officials to secure the erection of useful memorials in memory of the absent dead, the returned heroes and the historic deeds prformed by them.

Following this idea, auditoriums, coliseums, schools, libraries, community centers and even public improvements such as boulevards, parks and bridges could be built; monuments that would become the material body of our civic spirit; monuments that would forever inculcate the idea of self sacrifice and our duty to our fellow men. Thus could we live, work, study, read and find relaxation in these memorials. Instead of setting them apart as monuments merely to comemorate they would become a part of our daily lives.

INDIANA READILY ADOPTS IDEA.

Indiana readily took to the practical memorial idea and many communities now have it under serious consideration.

Indianapolis has long felt the need of a Coliseum or Auditorium in which large conventions could be held and Mayor Charles Jewett early advocated the proposition that the city seize this opportunity to erect just such a building as a memorial to the soldiers. He has suggested that a building to acommodate 30,000 people be erected in a good central location down town. Trips of inspection have been made to cities about the country which have coliseums and data is being collected in other ways in order to give Indianapolis a Liberty Hall or memorial that will be an ornament and at the same time most useful to the needs of the city. Bankers, merchants, contractors, architects and various clubs and organizations have shown a keen interest in the scheme, suggesting various phases for consideration. It is estimated the type of building desired will cost half a million dollars.

Gary, Evansville, Ft. Wayne, Rochester, Princeton, Greenfield and Greencastle have memorial buildings under consideration and in all of them the utility feature stands out most prominently. Other Indiana cities have debated the question of erecting war memorials but have not reached any definite conclusions.

GARY PLANS SHAPING UP.

So far the memorial idea at Gary has advanced farther than at other places. It is to be a private enterprise and is backed up by the builders and working-men of the city, having been launched by W. J. Stewart Hyde, secretary of the Builders and Traders Exchange. Tentative plans for the project have been completed by Architect Jos. M. LeVee, 673 Broadway, Gary, a cut of which appears on another page.

The coliseum will be erected on one of the most prominent and sightly corners in the city with entrances on two streets. Two prominent memorial arches as shown in the elevation will contain the memorial tablets to the soldiers and sailors and will represent the army, navy, aerial service, and all departments of the military organization . The building will contain a seating capacity of forty-five hundred (4500) the main balcony seating capacity, twelve hundred (1200) with about sixteen (16) shops and thirty-six (36) offices.

The basement will contain a banquet hall, kitchen, pool rooms, bowling alleys, in two sections set aside for each sex, baths, shoe shining parlors, etc. The banquet hall and grill room on the basement floor will be finished in the most approved style and the dining rooms will be beautifully decorated in white and gold.

The building will be strictly modern and will be open to roof and dome all glass. It will be heated throughout by the most modern steam and ventilating system. The height of the building from the sidewalk line to the coping will be fifty feet. The flag will float one hundred feet from the street level, dimensions of the building are as follows:

Frontage, 250 feet on the principal street.

Depth, 125 feet on the proposed side street, which will include the second main entrance of the coliseum. The two main memorials will be the entrances on the frontage and side.

To complete the memorial coliseum building will require an outlay of not to exceed the sum of $350,000. The amount of funds necessary to erect and complete said building will be provided by the board of directors co-operating with the advisory board. It is suggested that a 6 per cent. bond issue in the amount of $300,000 be made on the basis of six per cent. payable semi-annually in denominations to be recommended by the finance committee.

The soldiers' and sailors' memorial coliseum will be supervised and managed by a board of directors and an advisory board composed of members of the Builders' and Traders' Exchange, the workmen and business interests of Gary, all associated organizations including churches and clubs, benevolent societies, and all military organizations such as Civil war veterans and veterans of the world war, each will have a representative on the advisory board, which will provide a committee on finance, a committee on location, a committee on publicity, and a committee on memorials.

It is useful buildings that Indiana citizens should aim to erect, useful memorials, in which to live and congregate, being inspired by the same high resolve that prompted those whom they commemorate.

AROUND THE STATE

Archt. C. E. Scott, Terre Haute, formerly city building inspector during Mayor Gossom's administration, has reopened his office, 28 Beach Block, having resumed his architectural practice.

Engineer Frank Kattman, Terre Haute, is open for consultation as a mining and civil engineer. His office is located at 26 Beach Block.

The contractors of Terre Haute have organized under the name of The Associated Building Contractors of Terre Haute, the aim being to better building conditions by the co-operation of employers connected with the building industry and striving for fair uniform methods of practice in the building field. The following officers have been elected: President, Walker Caton; Secretary, Carl Muehler; Treasurer, A. W. Dudley.

THEN AND NOW

Interesting Comparisons Afforded by Rockport Construction.

In these days of excessive building costs, uncertainty of delivery of materials, labor difficulties, fire resisting construction and modern furniture equipment, a comparison with conditions in Indiana one hundred years ago is interesting. The court house now in course of construction at Rockport furnishes the opportunity for restrospection.

Just a century ago, by a special act of the State legislature, Spencer county was organized and its boundaries defined. In lieu of a court house, court was held and the county business was transacted at a private residence until suitable accommodations could be provided. The Board of County Commissioners was empowered to select a site and erect, as soon as convenient, the necessary buildings thereon.

Instead of a factional fight by citizens, as is frequently the case now days to influence the selection of a site, and a lot of preliminaries to provide for a bond issue, a central location was quickly selected, and, a sale of lots, laid out from land donated by private individuals, furnished the necessary funds to be used for building a court house and jail. This fund netted $9,255.50, to which was added $1,300 in cash donations. Ten per cent. of the amount derived from the sale of lots was to be used for the establishment and maintenance of a public library. It is of interest to note that Rockport today possesses a Carnegie Library, a most modern building, recently completed at a cost of $27,500.

To begin with the county commissioners had $9,629.95 at their disposal for the construction of a court house, an insignificant amount when compared with the requirements for public building construction operations in 1919. The commissioners today have $175,000, the amount set aside for the new court house.

High prices did not trouble the early commissioners for the surrounding forests offered them ample building material and to these they turned. A temporary log court house was built in 1818 and the county offices and court were moved from the private residence which had been used up to that time.

The commissioners then planned for a more substantial building, making arrangements for the erection of a brick court house and jail. Freight rates and rail congestion did not worry the officials and there was no time lost in examining numerous samples of face brick, for, the bricks were made near the site of the building. The contract was awarded but for what price the records are not clear except that it was in excess of $400.

The work was begun in 1818. It was at this stage that building operations took on a similarity to modern conditions for changes were made in the plans and "extras" crept into the transaction resulting in a controversy between the commissioners and the contractor who refused to continued the work. Finally the State legislature was appealed to and an act was passed authorizing the officials to allow the contractor additional amounts to cover the cost of the changes and further extended his time limit for the completion of the building, another feature used in present day construction operations. The building was completed in 1822 and was destroyed by fire in 1833. All records were destroyed in the fire except the marriage licenses which happened to be at the home of the county clerk. The plans for the new $175,000 court house accentuate modernity as they call for fireproof vaults and metal office furniture which will make the marriage license records safer at the court house than in the home of the county clerk.

After the fire of 1833 county business was once more transacted from a private residence and court was held in a nearby shop.

Building plans were later considered and in 1835 bids were advertised for for the construction of a court house. In view of the finances required for building three quarters of a century ago the following record is interesting. On November, 4th, the contract was awarded to Daniel Brown and T. P. Britton for $2,420, to be paid in payments as follows: Jan. 1st, 1836, $500; Jan. 1st, 1837, $1,000; the remaining $920 when the work was completed.

The building was of brick, 2 sty. high, 40x40, and was erected on the public square. In March, 1838, the building was completed and the last payment was made, amounting in all to $3,000.

Nothing daunted by their building experiences the tax payers got together in 1843 and asked for enlargements to the court house which were made. Then again in 1863 the commissioners took up the advisability of erecting a larger building. On March 15th, "After due consideration of the premises, it was ordered that the board proceed to the consideration of arrangements for the construction of a new court house."

Bids were advertised for and on April 20, 1863, the contract was awarded at $31,600 for the construction of a building 2 sty., 80x54, showing a gradual increase in the cost of construction, some of which was probably due to the then prevailing war conditions. This building was for 55 years the seat of the county government and has well paid for itself in the usefulness it has extended. It came into being in the midst of a great conflict, the Civil War, and terminated its career at the conclusion of a far greater upheaval, the World War. One remarkable record connected with the court house just wrecked to make room for its handsome, stone-faced, fireproof successor, is the fact that no man or woman was ever condemned to suffer the death penalty within its justice meting walls.

Great wood concrete distributing towers rise above century old trees scattered about the town and peer down to where the old Ohio laps at the road that wends its way down a rocky bluff to the river front; hoisting engines, as they lift their loads in place, shriek an unknown note a century ago; a host of workmen are busily engaged sheering walls toward the sky; all going toward the erection of the magnificent new court house that is to surmount the spot occupied by the little log court house of one hundred years ago; the one to cost a fortune, the other hewn from the forest.

Thus moves progress.

CONTRACTORS TO MEET

Important Meeting Scheduled at Indianapolis, August 6th.

Secretary C. C. Pierson of the Associated Building Contractors of Indiana has issued a call for a meeting to be held in Indianapolis, Wednesday, August 6th.

All members are urged to attend if possible as important matters relative to building conditions are to be taken up for discussion.

Secretary Pierson has just returned from Baltimore where he attended a meeting of contractors.

GARAGE CONSTRUCTION

Hedged About by Provisions to Minimize Fire Hazard.

In order to reduce as far as possible the fire menace that lurks about garages, the following rules and regulations relating to their construction have been set forth by the State Fire Marshal, under whose jurisdiction they come.

A garage shall be construed to mean a building in which are housed, for rent, care, demonstration, storage or sale, self-propelled vehicles or other wheeled machines, containing in the tanks thereof inflammable liquid for fuel or power; also all parts of the building an dall adjoining structures or buildings not cut off by an unpierced fire wall. All plans for such buildings shall be filed with the Building Inspector and shall also be submitted for approval of the State Fire Marshal.

No garage shall be allowed or kept in any building used for a school, place of assembly or detention hotel, apartment, tenement or lodging house, or within 50 feet of any school, place of assembly or detention. Any building erected or remodeled as a garage and occupied in part as an office building, manufacturing establishment, warehouse or store, shall have such parts entirely cut off from the portion used as a garage, by unpierced fire walls at least 12 inches thick, and by fireproof floors, and shall be provided with adequate means of exit independent of that used for the garage. All windows in the first two floors above parts used as a garage shall be provided with wire glass windows in metal frames.

All garages, except as hereinafter specified as private garages, shall be of fireproof construction. All trim or other interior finish must be of metal or of other non-inflammable material, approved by the Building Inspector. Floor finish shall be smooth and of concrete, brick or other incombustible material.

acter, shall be permitted below the floor level in any building erected or used for garage purposes and no floor shall be entirely below the street level.

All elevators and stairways in garages shall be enclosed with fireproof materials. All openings in stair or elevator enclosures shall be protected with automatic fire doors approved for this purpose.

No building of other than fireproof construction shall be remodeled for use as a garage, except that outside the fire limits, existing buildings of non-fireproof construction, other than frame buildings, when 30 feet distant from all other buildings and with no other occupancy, may, by special permission of the State Fire Marshal, be so used.

All automobile garages or shelters housing not more than three motors shall be known as private garages. A private located within 10 feet of any other building must be of fireproof construction. If more than 10 feet from any building, it must be built of non-combustible material throughout, except that, if outside the fire limits and not closer than 30 feet to any building, it may be constructed of combustible material, except walls, floors on which automobiles are kept and roof coverings, which shall be non-combustible. All portions of the building used for other purposes must be cut off from such storage place by unpierced fireproof walls and floors.

The heating for all buildings used for garage purposes must be done by steam or hot water. All boiler, or other furnaces, forges or other exposed fires, lights or spark-emitting devices or machines, and all repair shops, if on or below the topmost floor where inflammable liquids are present, must be in a room separated from all other parts of the garage by an unpierced firewall at least 8 inches thick. Such appliances may be in a fireproof room, with all doors and openings between such rooms and other parts of the garage provided with standard automatic closing fire doors kept closed, if 8 feet above the topmost floor where inflammable liquids are present. All such rooms must be ventilated at floor line.

Rooms containing highly inflamable liquids shall have openings for ventilation, of at least 30 square inches, along at least two walls and at floor level. These openings shall connect by incombustible flues to the outside air at a point not closer than 3 feet to any window or door opening. They shall be provided with 2x2 mesh wire screen on the inside of the wall, and unless laid with a downward slant direct to the outside air, shall conduct to and through a sparkless fan, run continuously, which shall be of sufficient size to completely change the air volume every ten minutes. Discharge outlets of vent pipes shall be provided with 20x20 mesh (or equivalent) brass wire screen.

ROAD INSPECTION

Under State Highway Commission Points to Better Road Construction.

Indiana is on the way to good roads.

The most important move in this direction was the establishment of the State Highway Commission by the last Legislature. Plans were at once formulated for the mapping out of a definite main highway system that would link up the various sections of the state with well built hard surfaced roads, thus making direct hauls possible and do away with long detours.

It will take several years to attain the end but when completed all-year travel between the important cities will be possible, for miles and miles of roads now incapable of holding up under heavy trucking and the wear of automobile travel will have been eliminated.

Contracts for many miles of the new highway system have been awarded and bids for other stretches are now being received.

Under the new highway commission law state highway inspectors for road improvements by the county commissioners are to be appointed to supervise and inspect the work, thus guaranteeing to the tax payers good roads.

Fifty property owners can petition for a disinterested inspector for road improvements in their district and already the citizens are taking advantage of the law. Inspectors have been appointed in Marion, Howard, Tippecanoe, Decatur and Kosciusko counties.

APPRECIATION

To Obtain It, Architect Must Educate by Compelling Effort.

Few vocations in life call for the rendering of such an extent of service as does the architectural profession. The architect's chief stock in trade is service. It is service that he sells, not mere plans, and, his success depends upon the degree of service he is capable of delivering.

It is true that the average citizen fails to understand the exact position of the architect, his real mission, his worth to the community, and many of the profession bemoan the fact that they are not appreciated and seem to feel that their efforts are all for naught.

Speaking of the architect's services A. F. Wickes of Gary, said: "If we stop to ask whether we are appreciated or not, why, we are lost. The man who stops to admire his own work is lost. The man who does not keep going on, stepping upward and higher and better, improving and changing his ways, is lost. He is standing still. I don't know of any great physician who stands and asks the public if he is appreciated. I don't know of any great artist that stands and hangs around the institute doors and asks if he is appreciated by the public. That's none of his business: it's small concern of his. It is his duty to go on and do the best he can.

"If we have chosen a life's work which entails a service to the public, then we are on a par with the soldier who enlists and surrenders his life to his country."

In connection with the above we happened across the following the other day, which seemed pertinent to the subject of service. Architects have much company when it comes to the feeling of a lack of appreciation.

"Actors are not the only ones who feel like blaming the audience if things go wrong. We all do it. Writers complain if the public doesn't read what they write. Hotel keepers feel abused if folks don't like the dining room. Storekeepers, doctors, lawyers, in fact, the whole human race join in one sad refrain that the public is unappreciative."

Yes, we all do it. And what good does it do? Where does it get us? People pass right by without buying our wares, no matter how sorry we feel for ourselves.

Al Jolson says there is nothing to do but to get right out on the stage and do a better job the next time. He is everlastingly right. If folks don't appreciate you, make them. Do things that compel attention. The best way to make the world concede recognition is to do. Up and at it—and whip it! Don't sit down and cry about it. Nobody will feel bad—except you—and that is not at all the idea you have in mind when you sit down to whine. Your idea is to make other people feel sorry about your misfortunes—but they don't. When you begin to yelp, they just reach under their seats for their hats and walk out."

INVESTIGATED, ADVANCE CONSTRUCTION REPORTS

That is the material from which the news columns of this publication are made.

Representatives of the RECORDER are continually calling on architects, contractors, public officials and owners in search of live, detailed construction news which is assorted under its proper head and arranged each week in a most convenient manner so that he who is interested in the Indiana Construction Industry may know at glance just what is going on in this line o endeavor that would interest him most.

These news items furnish leads unobtainable through any other news medium in the State and are invaluable to the Contractor, Manufacturer and Material-supply Man who is desirous of the opportunity of getting in direct contact with state building operations.

Those seeking news of certain cities and localities will find same under local headings where more complete details are given than in the classified columns.

FIRE RESISTIVE

Rather than Fireproof, is Term to be Applied to Construction.

It is unfortunate that the word "fireproof" used in connection with construction work has come into such general use to become confused with the more logical term "fire resistive." It has built up in the minds of the public a misconception that it will be difficult to correct. Whenever fire has attacked a so called fireproof building there has always been a howl of derision from those not well informed on building construction. Much newspaper space has been devoted to scoffing at the inefficiency of fireproof construction. For this reason it would be better to replace "fireproof" with "fire resisting" in the national vocabulary.

Every conflagration presents another instance of the fact that there is no such thing as an absolutely fireproof building, and that, when sufficient heat is applied to any known material, serious damage will follow. It is a noticeable fact, however, that in every case where exposed wall openings are protected by fire resisting metal doors or wired glass the fire is effectually blocked in that direction.

Fireproofing, or, properly speaking, fire resistance is a relative term, just as anything in this world is good or bad—only—in comparison with some other thing.

Fire resistive building tends to fire prevention. This is a most important fact when one stops to consider that the fire losses in the United States approximate around $30,000 per hour. Considering this latter from another angle, there is destroyed by fire each year one-half the cost of all new building in a year.

It was told at a meeting of fire insurance men that the keeper in a certain hospital for the insane used the following novel test of the sanity of the patients: a water cock was opened so that water flooded the floor, then the patients were given a mop and told to mop up the water. Those not idiots shut off the water first.

Fire prevention is the faucet, fire extinguishing the mop. The mop we have is the best obtainable and its use is necessary, but, why can't we turn off some of the water?

Large municipalities spend millions a year for fire extinguishment and only thousands for fire prevention. It is quite obvious that if more effort was made to close the faucet, a less vigorous use of the mop would be required.

Organized fire-fighting had its inception near the end of the seventeenth century. In the sense of regularly trained fire departments, it has grown more and more efficient until it is hard to find a way to better it at the present time. It is, however, forced upon us that the quenching of fires does not lessen the fire evil.

Important though fire extinguishment is, in relation to fire prevention, the expenditure of money and energy is out of proportion. The old saying, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" seems not to have influenced us much in this respect. Ignoring all economic teaching, we placed our dependence upon fire extinguishment which is costly and complicated, whereas, fire prevention is simple and relatively cheap. If it was possible to have a city of fire resistive buildings, the expense of the fire extinguishing feature would be relatively unimportant.

Possibly when this country is as old as some of the countries where the per capita fire loss is conspicuously low, and when the materials which best help us to make fires are more nearly depleted, we will adopt methods of building better suited to "'prevent" fires. But, why not accelerate this development and begin to realize on our wisdom?

It would seem that a bureau of prevention must be equipped and supported just as much as a bureau of extinguishing if we are to expect permanent improvement in the fire conditions of our homes and business buildings. A fire department is organized and maintained on the basis of extinguishing fires, not preventing them.

A community can well afford to encourage fire resistive construction because of its value as a fire stop in case of a conflagration and not a conflagration breeder. Statistics along this line, afforded by research, show that the average annual cost of maintaining fire departments in Europe is twenty cents per capita and in corresponding cities in the United States it is $1.53 per capita.

The fire departments of Europe do not compare with those of the United States in efficiency, personnel or equipment and yet the average fire loss per person is thirty-three cents in a number of the European countries while in the United States it averages $2.15. From this it would seem that more than fire extinguishment must be considered.

Authorities tell us that the low fire loss abroad is due largely to firt resistive construction. Practically all buildings in Europe are of steel, stone and concrete.

The fire waste in the United States is tremendous, running into the hundreds of millions. The term "waste" is used because the fire loss is absolutely irretrievable and constitutes a terrific drain upon the created resources of the country. Labor and material are utterly and irrevocably lost. The insurance on a burned building does not bring back the property that was destroyed.

It is only when there is a fire of harrowing proportions that the human hazard is given due consideration and it is then figured out how deaths might have been averted and the great conflagration prevented.

Everyone wants to reduce his insurance rate and the general average of premiums throughout the country. The way to do this is to decrease the fire risk.

Buildings must be erected that will not burn and constructed of materials that will not add fuel to the flames. Construction that is safest from fire is the most economical in the end. Architects are realizing this fact and are embodying the principles of fire protection engineering in their plans. Construction, after all, is the foundation of fire prevention.

Fireproofing is but fire resisting, and that is a relative term. Nothing has been discovered for building purposes that an intense heat will not damage; yet, proper, materials, correctly designed and installed, will fire-proof buildings against all average fires.—(From paper read by R. J. Fenstermaker, at Convention of Indiana Sanitary and Water Supply Association.)

UNCERTAINTY

That Grips Indiana, Likewise Holds Rest of the Country.

Indiana is not alone in her uncertainty as pertains to construction conditions. Lack of definite knowledge as regards the future trend of prices, labor squalls, scarcity of men, indecision on the part of prospective builders and the undercurrent of unrest that is agitating the atmosphere is not her concern alone, she has considerable company, in fact most of the country is perturbed likewise.

C. C. Pierson, Indianapolis, secretary of the Associated Building Contractors of Indiana, who has just returned from Baltimore where he attended a board meeting of the National Building Exchanges says, after having been in conversation with contractors and builders from all over the country, that he has come to the conclusion that Indiana is not in such a bad way after all, in fact, conditions here are in better shape than in many other sections of the country.

The various contractors from sundry localities report more work than has been up for years and that there is still more in prospect, big work. Many said they had almost more than they could handle and were not soliciting any more business. One large contractor from Atlanta said there was more work there than he had ever seen or heard of before, that he had several million dollars worth of contract work on hand, and yet, he did not know how he was going to come out on it due to the prevailing uncertainty of prices and the tendency of labor to make further demands for increased wages.

Other building men spoke of similar conditions in different sections of the country. There was an expressed hope that there would not be any too great change in the future so that the work might proceed and enable the contractors to "get by," break even, as it were, nobody seeming to cherish dreams of big profits.

Mr. Pierson says the concensus of opinion is to "sit tight" and hope that things will work out to a satisfactory conclusion. This related not only to the construction industry but to various other spheres of business, being the trend of expression of mercantile men and others with whom Mr. Pierson talked on the trains and around the hotels.

Everyone is working hard to pull things around pinning their faith to Hope which seems to be the keystone of the future.

ADVANCE IN PRICES

Announced in the Building Material Market This Week.

As was predicted; the man who deferred or contemplates deferring building until prices come down is doomed to a wait.

The building material markets have held firm all spring and far into the summer, ruling stronger as each week passed. There has been a heavy demand, especially in the lumber market and along the lines pertaining to residence requirements as there has been considerable house building, remodeling and repairs.

Lumber has shown frequent advances every few weeks with a decided brace recently. One lumber man remarked that it was hard to keep up with the market as there was no telling what changes twenty-four hours would bring forth. The call for certain grades has been extremely heavy with a corresponding advance in price as compared with quotations on other stocks. No 1 common grades are ruling on an average of $3.00 per thousand in advance of No. 2 stock. Flooring prices continue to rise. Oak flooring is practically off of the market as lumber men have been advised not to take on any more orders as they can not quote with any degree of certainty. Word from the mills is that labor is hard to get and there is an almost depleted supply of oak flooring as against a heavy demand.

Radiation has advanced 12½ per cent. over former quotations; lime has jumped $1.00 a ton over recent list prices and all grades of brick have shown slight increases in the market figures.

Every indication points to impending advances in many other lines of building materials, advances that, if they mature, will have a decided effect on building operations as architects report that the high prices are beginning to pinch and retard prospective building. The architects claim there is all sorts of prospective work and it does not require much effort to line it up, but, to "put it across" is another matter in view of the way prices are ruling.

With a stable market there should have been a good volume of building business this fall. However, the advances that are now appearing will have a tendency to curtail business as present construction costs are almost prohibitive to the investor and the private home builder does not feel warranted to put any more into his project.

COMPLAINT

Made by County Surveyor at Tendency of Contractors not to Bid.

The tendency of certain public improvement contractors these days to inquire as to the estimated cost of proposed road and, on learning same, refusing to submit bids because they intimate that the estimates are too low has aroused the surveyors about the state as they say it is a reflection on their ability. Some of the surveyors are of the belief that there is an effort on the part of certain contractors to force the public officials to allow a greater margin of profit on public work.

There has been a great deal of road improvement work in Indiana offered for letting this season only to be delayed because no bids were submitted on the day when the county commissioners had advertised that contracts would be awarded.

The fact that this "no bid submitted" feature was universal instead of isolated has attracted the attention of Will J. Davis, surveyor of Tipton County, who has arisen to defend the public officials, especially the surveyors, against the "too low estimate" argument of the contractors. He says, "Big fat jobs have been offered in the various counties yet there have been no bidders. Is this a proposition to force the engineers, road reviewers and county commissioners to re-estimate the proposed improvements that certain coffers may be filled, thereby making a killing, yea, a massacre?

"The estimates in dispute invariable are made on F. O. B., prices or estimated prices that are quoted and submitted to the engineers of the various counties by the various material men, and are in excess of at least ten per cent. of the price submitted to the contractor. The surveyor bases his estimate on these prices plus the overhaul, the overhead expense, plus the special contingencies that may arise, plus twenty per cent. and in some cases thirty and even forty per cent. for net profit to the contractors.

"It is possible that one or two engineers in the state might make too low an estimate but it is not reasonable to think that all would do so. It is my opinion that the better plan to pursue would be not to offer any hard surfaced road improvements for contract until the time that the contractors will be willing to accept contracts in which there is allowance made for a reasonable profit.

"I know that things are high and very high, so are taxes, there is nothing that is not away up these days, even the contractors' idea of his ability to out-figure the material men's prices that are quoted on a bona fide basis, but, things will gradually work out in the end if a little discretion is used and should run smoother later on."

DECREASED ACTITITY

Evidenced by July Building Permits.—Indianapolis the Exception.

Except for Indianapolis, building operations, as indicated by the permits issued during July by the building inspection departments of the larger cities in Indiana, showed a decreased activity when compared with the volume of business of the months just preceding.

This does not necessarily mean that construction work is waning; instead the lull is traceable to the fact that many prospective builders have gone away on vacations and are holding projects in abeyance till their return.

Architects report many buildings, on which plans have been completed, that are to be figured as soon as owners get back. Others say owners have taken plans with them to study and approve during their vacation periods and expect these projects to mature within the next few weeks.

The advancing of material prices has caused delay in the awarding of some contracts that undoubtedly would have gone to swell the building permit record, but so far this feature has not greatly interfered with construction work.

News reports from Ft. Wayne, Gary and Evansville indicate that the vacation period tended to curtail operations in those cities, especially in the residence line, comparatively few new projects being started as compared to the usual volume of business transacted.

Indianapolis, with a total valuation of $1,746,357 for the permits issued, showed a gain of $1,094,549 over the figures for the same period last year. For the same period, Terre Haute showed an increase of $13,698; Richmond also advanced her figures $2,028; while South Bend did not reach last year's returns by $59,863. The official returns from Gary, Ft. Wayne and Evansville had failed to arrive by press time.

INVESTIGATED, ADVANCE CONSTRUCTION REPORTS

That is the material from which the news columns of this publication are made.

Representatives of the RECORDER are continually calling on architects, contractors, public officials and owners in search of live, detailed construction news which is assorted under its proper head and arranged each week in a most convenient manner so that he who is interested in the Indiana Construction Industry may know at glance just what is going on in this line o endeavor that would interest him most.

These news items furnish leads unobtainable through any other news medium in the State and are invaluable to the Contractor, Manufacturer and Material-supply Man who is desirous of the opportunity of getting in direct contact with state building operations.

Those seeking news of certain cities and localities will find same under local headings where more complete details are given than in the classified columns.

Comply with Fire Regulations and save the owner excessive fire insurance rates by providing a modern, quick, safe, clean and accurate method for storing his oils and other liquids.

This Cut 35 is of high grade steel with a welded tank of any desired capacity up to five barrels. The pump measures half pints, pints and quarts. A drip tube takes care of any excess oil. A lock makes it thief and fool-proof. No dirt, dust, spillage, waste or fire danger.

Bulletin 35 ICR describes this unit in detail.

Many other models for lubricating oils and volatile liquids made in single units or battery.

A card of inquiry does not obligate you in the least and will bring complete information by the first mail.

GENERAL INTEREST

Being Aroused Among Contractors by the State Association.

Reports made at the executive meeting of the Board of Directors of the Associated Building Contractors of Indiana, held a few days ago at Indianapolis, demonstrated the fact that there is a keen interest being manifested in the organization by contractors all over the state and that the builders in many of the cities are organizing local contractors' associations to act as subsidiary bodies to the state organization. At Vincennes, Evansville, Terre Haute and Ft. Wayne the associated contractors have organized and efforts are being exerted in that direction by the contracting interests at South Bend. Gary has a strong organization of contractors known as the Builders and Traders Exchange and is about to apply for membership in the state association.

PREVIOUS LACK OF UNITY

There is no question but that the contracting industry has suffered for years to a more or less degree from a lack of co-operation among the employers; there was no concerted effort to secure helpful legislation to protect the contracting interests; methods employed were of a more individualistic nature; there was little uniformity of practice; and when jurisdictional disputes arose between crafts much valuable time was lost through a stoppage of work until the difficulty was threshed out.

It was to improve conditions and eliminate such hindrances that the organization of the Associated Building Contractors of Indiana was first conceived, it being the theory of those behind the move that the greatest good was to be accomplished in serving the majority first. Thus it was sought to establish in the contracting industry a bond of fellowship, inculcate a spirit of equity and justice to govern dealings between contractors, architects, craftsmen, unions, dealers and all engaged in the construction field.

INFLUENCE SPREADING

The principle of the association was at once accepted and its influence is spreading to all sections of the state. It was this spirit that made it possible to meet menacing situations at Indianapolis, Gary and Ft. Wayne early in the spring and work them out by arbitration to a satisfactory conclusion in each instance. At present there are labor difficulties at issue and the officers of the association are working hard with the union officials to reach an amicable understanding.

In order to obtain a fair uniform method of practice to protect the industry as well as those concerned, a committee was appointed by the Board of Directors to draft a standard form of contract for use in dealings between the general and sub-contractor, this matter to be gone into at once and submitted for approval as soon as possible.

LABOR AND HIGH COSTS DISCUSSED

Serious consideration was devoted to the prevailing labor situation and it was the concensus of opinion that the difficulty in securing labor was not so much due to a shortage but to the high wages demanded.

The prevailing high costs all along the line were gone into, especially regarding building and living. The members of the association say they have done all in their power to encourage the "build now" move but increased costs of materials and advancing wages are doing much to retard building operations, in fact, are daily discouraging prospective builders. As for the high cost of living, it was a matter of deep regret that nothing had been done to curb prices and those present at the meeting endorsed the action proposed to have all contractors of the state take an active part in encouraging investigations that would tend to bring about a lowering of prices where the necessities of life were concerned. Letters are to be sent out by Secretary C. C. Pierson to all members of the state association asking them that they write the Indiana Congressman from their districts to interest themselves in legislation that will tend to a reduction in living costs.

ADOPTION OF OFFICIAL ORGAN

President A. J. Hoffman, Evansville, called the attention of the board members to the Indiana Construction Recorder and its efforts to improve and advance the interests of the state construction industry, recommending that it be adopted as the official organ of the association. This was done by unanimous vote. The contractors present commented on the reliability and timeliness of the construction reports carried in the news columns. Then too, they spoke of the market quotation page and said it was one of the best features ever inaugurated for the benefit of the contractor as it kept him posted on current prices and was being watched by the contractors. The Indexed Buyer's Guide, listing the various material firms, came in for favorable mention, contractors stating that it was proving a handy reference in that it put them in touch with the local representatives of various material firms and saved time that was formerly consumed in writing to the main office only to be referred back to the local representative which required more correspondence and delay.

The Recorder will publish the official news of the association, notices of meetings, elections and items of interest to the entire state contracting industry.

Another board meeting is to be held at Indianapolis, September 7.

Those present at the recent Indianapolis meeting were: Pres. A. J. Hoffman, Evansville; First V-Pres., Max Irmscher, Ft. Wayne; Second V-Pres., Charles Morrow, Muncie; Third V-Pres., J. W. Goodall, Peru; Secy., C. C. Pierson, Indianapolis; L. B. Snowden, Gary; C. C. Heinzmann, Marion; A. E. Kemmer, Lafayette; F. W. Jungclaus, Indianapolis.

UNDERSTANDING

Must be Reached at Once if Building Situation is to be Saved.

Commenting on the unrest of labor employed in the construction industry which, each day, is becoming more and more of a menace to building operations, several prominent Indiana architects have expressed themselves as favoring a complete threshing out of the matter, a bringing of the issue to a head. They claim that the sooner this is done the better it will be for all concerned for building will never come into its own until there is a definite understanding between the various elements engaged in construction work.

Chicago, where jurisdictional disputes between various trades and the violation of joint arbitration agreements occurred resulting in a complete suspension of building operations, presented a good example of what misunderstandings and unrest will lead to.

INDIANA ATMOSPHERE PERTURBED

There is a similar discontent invading the atmosphere of Indiana and unless it is snuffed out or means taken to combat its influence there is serious likelihood of disruption in the local construction field.

Indianapolis has been on the verge of an upheaval several times this season and only the hardest kind of work has prevented the unrest from cropping out to cause trouble. Gary and Ft. Wayne too, felt the hot breath of the menace but managed by arbitration to escape its withering effect.

The clutch of the monster is upon Indianapolis again and those most vitally affected are struggling hard in an endeavor to free the construction interests from the threatening tentacles.

STAND OF CHICAGO ARCHITECTS ENDORSED

Some of the architects have come out squarely as favoring such action as was taken by the Executive Committee of the Illinois Chapter, A. I. A., and the Board of Directors of the Illinois Society of Architects, representing the organized architects of Chicago, who realized the gravity of the situation that confronted those engaged in, or who contemplated construction work, and believed that the function of the architect should be more in the nature of an arbitrator rather than a participant in such difficulties as arose to confront the Chicago construction interests and made the following statement:

"The architects believe that the question of an increase in wages, not only in the case of carpenters, but as regards all other trades, should be settled only after a careful study of the Economic Conditions entering into the situation, and that the final settlement should be based upon a fair wage commensurate upon the cost of living, and upon the amount of work done for the pay given.

We believe that no relief from the increasing cost of living can be obtained without a general increase of production for the labor expended.

The architects believe that an agreement entered into in good faith should be a solemn covenant binding all parties subscribing thereto. Since a strike was called by various unions in violation of their agreements, which agreements state that the work should be continued and the disputes settled by arbitration, the Architectural Societies here represented favor a complete cessation of all building industries in the city of Chicago pending the speediest possible settlement of the vital questions which have so hampered and disrupted the building industry.

WORK LIMITATION SCORED

The architects further believe that any limitation on the amount of work to be performed or the skill attained increases the cost of living for the worker himself and such rules and understandings limiting work should be abolished.

Jurisdictional disputes should be eliminated by agreement or arbitration so as not to increase the cost of building or to decrease production.

A proper system of apprenticeship should be encouraged so as to produce more skilled workers.

There should be no limitation on the freedom of trade as between cities, states, or localities favorably situated for production of building material.

There should be no discouragement of the use of materials, methods or limitations tending to reduce cost or increase production.

Therefore, be it resolved that it is for the best interest of all concerned that there be a complete cessation of all work until there is an amicable settlement of all these various matters so vital, not only to the employers, but to the laboring man and the public in general."

REGULATIONS

Covering Chimney Construction and Installation of Smoke Pipes.

Since so many fires have their origin in defective flues the State Fire Marshal has issued the following rules and regulations to cover chimney construction and the installation of heater and smoke pipes:

CHIMNEYS AND FIREPLACES

All chimneys shall be built of brick, stone or concrete. They shall have walls at least four inches thick and be lined on the outside with well-burnt terra cotta chimney tile set in Portland cement mortar. The lining shall be continuous from the bottom of the flue to its extreme height. Chimneys of all low pressure boilers or furnaces used in hotels or other large buildings, also smoke flues for bakers' ovens, large cooking ranges and large laundry stoves, and all flues used for similar purposes shall be at least 8 inches in thickness and be lined continuously on the inside with well-burnt terra cotta chimney tile set in Portland cement mortar. All such chimneys shall be capped with terra cotta, stone, concrete or cast iron.

All chimneys shall project at least 3 feet above the point of contact with a flat roof, or 2 feet above the ridge of a pitched roof.

No chimney in any building shall have wooden supports of any kind, but shall be wholly supported by stone, brick or iron starting from the foundation; and all chimneys which are dangerous from any cause shall be repaired and made safe or taken down.

All wooden beams or framework shall be separated at least 2 inches from the chimney, and no wooden furring shall be placed against any chimney; the plastering shall be directly on the masonry or on metal lathing.

The fireback of all fireplaces hereafter erected shall be not less than 8 inches in thickness of solid brickwork, nor less than 12 inches if of stone. When a grate is set in a fireplace, a lining of firebrick at least 2 inches in thickness shall be added to the fireback; or soapstone, tile or cast iron may be used if filled solidly behind with fireproof material.

PIPING

No smoke pipe shall be placed nearer than 9 inches to any woodwork or to any wooden lath and plaster partition or ceiling.

Where smoke pipes pass through a wooden lath and plaster partition, they shall be guarded by galvanized iron ventilated thimbles at least 12 inches larger in diameter than the pipes, or by galvanized iron thimbles built in at least 8 inches of brickwork.

No smoke pipes shall pass through any floor or the roof of any building.

All heater pipes from hot air furnaces where passing through partitions or floors must be doubled tin pipes with at least ½-inch air space between them. No steam or hot water pipes shall be nearer than 1 inch to any woodwork. Every steam or hot water pipe passing through combustible floors or ceilings or wooden lath and plaster partitions shall be protected by a metal tube 1 inch larger in diameter than the pipe. All wooden boxes or casings enclosing steam or hot water heating pipes or wood covers to recesses in walls in which steam or hot water heating pipes are placed, shall be lined with metal.

FURNACES, STOVES, RANGES

No kitchen range, furnace or stove in any building shall be placed less than 3 feet from any woodwork or wooden lath and plaster partition unless the woodwork or partition is properly protected by metal shields, in which case the distance shall be not less than 18 inches. Metal shields shall be loosely attached, thus preserving an air space behind them. Connections to gas stoves, heaters or ranges shall be made by metal pipes.

WORKING PRINCIPLES

Advocated to Govern Dealings between Employer and Employee.

The principles of industrial relations set forth by the United States Chamber of Commerce in Referendum No. 27, recently submitted to its constituent organizations, were voted on affirmatively by the Associated General Contractors. These principles, thirteen in number, recognize that employer and employee have a mutual interest in industrial enterprise; that responsibility rests alike upon employers, wage-earners and the public for regularity and continuity of employment; that wages should be adjusted with due regard to the cost of living and the right of every man to decent conditions of life and work, and that no reduction in wages should be made until all other costs have been reduced so far as possible; that public interest requires adjustment of industrial relations by peaceful methods; that industrial harmony will be best promoted by adequate representation of the parties interested, and that existing methods of representation should be studied and more generally adopted; that whenever agreements are made they should be faithfully observed, and should contain provision for prompt and final interpretation in event of controversy. The subterfuge of fixing a basic day as a device for increasing compensation, and the arbitrary restriction of output below reasonable standards is condemned. The right of workers to organize is clearly recognized; administration of employment and management of labor is definied as a distinct and important function of management; and the permanent establishment of a system of national employment offices approved.—(News Letter, The Associated General Contractors of America.)

BRIXMENT The Perfect Cement for all kinds of Mortars

No Lime—No Bother—No Soaking—No Waste
Simply Mix With Sand and Use

BRIXMENT Is a slow-setting, plastic and smooth-working cement for masonry. It does not require soaking or any preliminary preparation. Simply mix with sand and use.

BRIXMENT Works long and buttery. Resembles lime putty in its working quality, yet has an initial set in about four hours. One part of BRIXMENT to three parts of clean, sharp sand makes a mortar which in a very short time exceeds common building brick in crushing strength.

BRIXMENT Costs no more than ordinary lime mortar in the Indiana markets. In most cases it means a decided saving. A barrel of BRIXMENT is approximately four and one-half cubic feet. Mixed one part BRIXMENT to three parts sand, it gives five-eighths yards of excellent mortar—enough to lay one thousand bricks.

BRIXMENT Makes firm friends. Indiana architects and contractors who have tried BRIXMENT, have become permanent users of this superior material. A test in actual work is sufficient proof of its merits. The dealers listed below stock BRIXMENT. Any additional information desired may be secured by writing the manufacturers—

INVESTIGATED, ADVANCE
CONSTRUCTION REPORTS

That is the material from which the news columns of this publication are made.

Representatives of the RECORDER are continually calling on architects, contractors, public officials and owners in search of live, detailed construction news which is assorted under its proper head and arranged each week in a most convenient manner so that he who is interested in the Indiana Construction Industry may know at glance just what is going on in this line o endeavor that would interest him most.

These news items furnish leads unobtainable through any other news medium in the State and are invaluable to the Contractor, Manufacturer and Material-supply Man who is desirous of the opportunity of getting in direct contact with state building operations.

Those seeking news of certain cities and localities will find same under local headings where more complete details are given than in the classified columns.

NEW BUILDING CODES

Several Indiana Cities Considering Improved Construction Laws.

Muncie is to have a new building code.

Growing industrial interests, necessitating new factories, extensions and alterations and the attendant increase in population calling for extensive residence and housing facilities to take care of the workers, awoke the building interests of the city to the lack of important legislation covering construction and the necessity of a stricter supervision of such work.

The Associated Building Contractors of Muncie started the move for a more substantial and permanent upbuilding of the city in order to protect the public from dangerous builders, to reduce the fire hazzard and unify construction standards. At first there was considerable opposition to the proposed legislation, a selfish opposition that insisted a building code would interfere with individual rights in that certain specified conditions would tend to increase construction costs, curtail investment returns and retard building that otherwise would proceed if no restrictions were imposed. However, the contractors were obdurate and insisted that the public was entitled to the protection that the proposed building code would afford. They argued along the lines of public safety, reduced insurance rates, better construction, and after a hard fight, bowled over the opposition.

Finally the proposition was put up to the city council where it met with unanimous approval and an ordinance was passed providing for the drafting of a building code and the establishment of a city building inspector's office at a salary of $3,000 per annum.

The new code is to be modeled after the South Bend building code and in it will be incorporated the various provisions covering building construction as set forth in the State Housing Law, State Inspection Law, the rules and regulations of the State Industrial Board, the State Fire Marshall's Office and the State Board of Health. It will create a fire zone in the business district, provide for ventilation in buildings where people congregate, embody details designed to provide for the general safety of the public, seek to reduce the fire menace in residence construction and contain regulations relative to the planning and laying out of new residence districts with a view to utility and the beautification of the various localities.

Those interested in the proposition have begun work on the new code and hope to have it ready for presentation to the city council in a short time.

Richmond too has inaugerated a campaign for a new building code as the one now in use is antiquated. An effort is to be made to revise the present city building law to meet present day conditions. So far it has gone no farther than the point of discussion but there is a strong sentiment in favor of a revision. The city also has a separate plumbing code and there is a movement on foot to incorporate this in the new building code.

Many municipal officials and various construction interests about the state have expressed themselves as favoring the passage of a state building code, explaining that they consider it most practical to combine all the cities of the state under one code when it comes to building.

WORKING SCOPE

Extended by Contractors Association at Evansville Proves Beneficial.

Realizing that the contractor's interests extend beyond mere construction, the Evansville General Contractors Association has sought to broaden the scope of its work and impart its influence throughout the entire local construction field. Organized originally to promote and protect the contracting industry, to create a bond of fellowship and establish harmony amongst its members, the association grew rapidly and has done much to establish the contracting business on a firm and efficient basis, eliminating petty jealousies and methods that formerly worked to the detriment of the industry. It created unity within the ranks of the contractors and afforded them a solid front to meet difficulties that arose now and then to retard work and cause serious delays in construction operations.

Having accomplished the original aim of the association the members turned their attention to the kindred interests that affect, more or less, contracting affairs. It was sought to establish a general understanding and harmony amongst all those engaged in the building industry in Evansville. To this end arrangements were made to take in associate members from the ranks of the architects, subcontractors and material supply-men. The move met with instant response on the part of the architects, brick, lumber, iron and other men in the supply business and is creating a beneficial effect in the building field.

Every fourth Wednesday of the month the general contractors and associate members of the association meet at one of the prominent hotels for luncheon and discuss the various conditions that arise to confront them. The architect sets forth his side of the matter, the contractor states his problems and the material man goes into production costs, market conditions and transportation questions, all of which tends to enlighten those concerned as to the elements that enter into construction operations.

Much credit for the extension of the operations and influence of the association is due to the following officers: President, G. H. Bippus; Vice-President, J. R. Anderson; Secretary, A. J. Hoffman; Treasurer, Charles Scarborough.

PRODUCTION INCREASE

Best Way to Offset High Prices and Protect Country's Industry.

Facts brought out in recent discussions relative to the advancement of prices, the high cost of living and the demand for increased wages are worthy of attention.

There are great dangers arising from the upward tendency of prices of the necessities of life and, unless some influence is brought to bear to check this trend, wage increases will be necessitated in order to reach a reasonable living scale. Higher levels of prices follow higher wages, prices always keeping in advance of wages, proceeding to constantly higher levels that threaten the stability of business and forebode disaster.

It must be said to the credit of the construction industry, that the prices of building materials and construction in general have increased twenty-three per cent. less than the price of other commodities in general. This has occurred despite the fact that building materials have been greatly affected by the price of other commodities and that freight rates on building materials have, as a class, been increased twice as much as those on other commodities.

The welfare of the construction industry depends on the continued and regular erection of buildings and not on spasmodic booms. It is of interest to the entire buidling fraternity to maintain the present advantage of price differential in relation to other commodities, in so far as it may be possible to withstand the pressure brought about by the continued advance of raw materials, labor, freight rates and other things that enter into construction operations.

Every effort should be made to protect the industry of the country by encouraging the increase of production without increasing prices.

SERVICES DONATED

In Worthy Cause by South Bend Construction Forces.

Once more the building fraternity of Indiana has given ample evidence of its public spirit and shown that in a common cause selfishness does not play a part to interfere with the attainment of an end for good. This latest demonstration comes from South Bend and speaks well for the fraternity in that section.

The architects, contractors, material supply-men and craftsmen all have their misunderstandings and dissentions and, at times, relations near the breaking point, but, when the call for aid goes out to meet an emergency they quickly rally to its summons and display a loyal unity.

South Bend, like other cities, has her unfortunate mothers, babies and children who suffer from the summer heat in stuffy houses in the down-town districts, who know only heated plastic asphalt streets in the day time and sweltering rooms at night. They know not the soothing comfort of green fields nor the cool fresh breath of country air.

Six miles out from that city there is a place called Chain-O-Lakes where green fields abound, where waters lap and the air is pure and wholesome.

The Elks Lodge of South Bend conceived the scheme of establishing a Fresh Air Mission at the Chain-O-Lakes for the benefit of the city's heat stricken mothers and children and took the matter up with those of the construction industry. There was a hearty endorsement of the proposition and Architect W. W. Schneider made plans and donated them to the cause for the construction of a frame building 1 story high, 20x104, with a dining room and kitchen wing 40x24. Then it was that the contractors entered upon the scene and offered the services of their organizations for the construction of the building. The craftsmen of the Labor Unions not to be outdone donated their labor.

Early one morning the building fraternity set forth for The Chain-O-Lakes, there being approximately a hundred men in the party, and, upon arrival at their destination they set to work immediately. All day the men sawed, hammered and constructed and when the day was done the building was completed and ready for occupancy. That night Mr. Roy Bird, superintendent of The Rescue Mission of South Bend, together with his wife and daughter spent the night there, taking up their home in the new building to act as hosts for the rest of the summer to the more unfortunate jaded and sickly women and children from the city.

That is what the South Bend construction men did, built a house in 12 hours, nor did they collect a cent for their services, that new life might be given to the suffering of their community.

AROUND THE STATE

The United Vacuum Appliance Co., Connersville, announces the sale of its entire vacuum cleaner business to Landers, Frary and Clark of New Britain, Conn. The manufacture and sale of "Connersville" stationary vacuum cleaners will be continued in Connersville as the United Vacuum Appliance Division of Landers, Frary & Clark under the management of E. H. Glass and Joseph M. Wilkin.

The Bloomfield Brick Co., W. A. Shoemaker, sales manager, Indianapolis, has moved its office from the Chamber of Commerce Building to 238 Indiana Pythian Building.

C. B. Mayer, Chamber of Commerce Building, Indianapolis, formerly with the Truscon Steel Co., is now working independently and is open for consultation as an engineer on fireproof construction.

Architect Oscar W. Holmes, formerly of Westport, Ind., has removed to Louisville, Ky., where he has established an office at 1510 Hepburn avenue.

Architects Bass-Knowlton & Graham, Indianapolis, have opened a branch office at 213 Kennedy Bldg., Tulsa, Okla., with H. I. Reynolds in charge.
